The Right Answer.
Lady Astor Returns.
American English.
British Socialism.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE ANSWER of President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg to the Franco-British plan for a naval agreement notifies Europeans, none too soon, that this is an independent country, not a British or French dominion.

It is refreshing and reassuring to read in the plainest kind of English, that the United States "cannot consent to proposals which would leave the door wide open to unlimited building of certain types of ships of a highly efficient combatant value (to France and England), and would impose restrictions only on those types peculiarly suitable to American needs."

This country is indebted to Universal Service for publishing the real facts in regard to the French-British secret treaty and to President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg for sending in exactly the right answer to nations that were recently begging us to save them from destruction—when they had "their backs to the wall," as Kitchener put it.

This nation should now build whatever it NEEDS. Cruisers, submarines and airplanes, especially the last two.

"We have the money," as Britain used to say, and should outbuild France and Britain combined.

Lady Astor, born in Virginia, busy now in the House of Commons, returns to the United States, saying: "The women of the world are organizing for peace." They have always been organizing for peace, and manufacturing sons for war.

American "talking movies," seen and heard in England, arouse enthusiasm and prediction that the silent picture is doomed.

British critics suggest that American actors should "cultivate Oxford accent." They don't like our brand of English.

Perhaps the talking movies will teach them to like the American language, just as they have been taught by our silent movies to like American clothes and some other things.

The British premier, Baldwin, refuses to accept tariff change as the issue in the coming election. Socialism is the REAL issue, he says. Socialism, in his opinion, is opposed to constitutionalism and "individualism," which means presumably the desire and right of the individual to get what he can and keep it in the good old way.

Great is the difference, as regards the power of "radicalism" in Britain and in the United States. With us, socialism is an interesting theory, like the fourth dimension or the squaring of the circle.

Only socialists take socialism seriously here. And the ablest of the American socialists, Victor Berger, a really educated man, would probably tell you that to raise wages 20 per cent is to reduce socialism 20 per cent.

On Wednesday work was stopped for an hour everywhere in Palestine, among Jewish workers, as a protest against police interference at the Wailing Wall on Yom Kippur.

Shops were closed, traffic stopped in Jerusalem, while 10,000 listened to addresses of denunciation by rabbis.

The Wailing Wall, at which Jews periodically express their grief, belongs to the Arabs, under the League of Nations settlement. The Jews demand that it be turned over to them.

A discussion affecting all the holy places in Jerusalem may result.

The interest rates paid by business men in America continue higher than anywhere in the world, except in Chinese shops.

In Wall Street call money yesterday cost 5 per cent. Business men borrowing on time paid 7⅜ per cent.

High finance is doing what it can to kill the golden goose, but probably will be satisfied if it can strip all the fat off that goose before it dies. It should be someone's business to remind national banks that usury is illegal, as well as immoral. President Coolidge might choose to do it.

EX-G. O. P. FLAYS DRYS BEFORE DEMOCRATS

NILAND AND COLE AID IN SCRAP; EX-G. O. P. HITS DRY LAW, LAUDS SMITH

Thomas F. Niland of East Boston and George F. Gilbody, press agent for General Cole, engaged in a fist fight at the Democratic State convention in Tremont Temple late today. Both fell over a press table. They were separated by two policemen.

A ringing denunciation of the policies of the Republican party, which four times elected him mayor of Worcester, was sounded today by Rufus B. Dodge, speaking before 3000 Democrats in state convention at Tremont Temple.

Dodge paid high tribute to the qualities of Governor Smith and made a lengthy attack upon prohibition, which he declared was "now an issue and will continue to be so until the question definitely is settled."

A plank condemning "efforts of interests outside our boundaries to break down our system of regulating public utilities"—a plank obviously aimed at the power trusts—was contained in the platform laid before the convention.

DRY LAW NOT NAMED.

"We demand legislation which will preserve and strengthen that system. We demand enforcement of such regulations as will really protect the people from exploitation and extortion," read the clause.

No mention of modification of the Volstead act appeared, although

SEIZE ROSLINDALE MAN AS ASSAILANT OF NIECE OF EX-GOVERNOR COX

Frank B. Rourke, 35, married and the father of four children, of Pinehurst st., Roslindale, was arrested after a battle today charged with attacking Miss Dorothy Cox, daughter of Judge Louis Cox and niece of ex-Governor Channing H. Cox.

According to the police the attempted attack took place in an automobile parked in shrubbery in a lonely spot off Gardner st., Roslindale, near the Charles river. Rourke was later arraigned in West Roxbury court.

Patrolman Jesse Worms of Division 17 was patrolling his route when he heard a woman cry for help, the police say. Worms dashed in the direction of the cry and claims to have found a parked automobile in which was Miss Cox struggling with Rourke.

The patrolman seized Rourke and dragging him from the car aided to place the man under arrest. Rourke is said to have resisted, and

3 KILLED BY GAS IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Sept. 29—Reaching home early today Frank Stuer, local coal merchant, found his wife and two children stretched on a daybed in the living-room of their home on Amherst st., all dead from gas.

The dead are:

Mrs. Grace Stuer, 31.
Beatrice Stuer, 11.
Francis Stuer, 10.

Police who were called notified Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed and after several hours of investigation into circumstances which the authorities termed mysterious, Dr. Reed pronounced death due to accident.

Stuer installed gas as soon as he entered the house. It seemed to come from the living room, the door of which was shut tightly. Opening this door and switching on the lights he discovered the tragedy.

Besides the three members of his family, a canary and a cat were also dead. He called the police. Dr. Herbert Coulson and the central fire au

TWO FLIERS KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS ON LINKS

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 29 (AP)—Two men, one of whom was believed to be Dewey Caldwell, connected with a flying club here, were killed today when their plane crashed on the 16th fairway of the Plum Hollow golf course. The plane cracked up after flying so low it narrowly missed golf players. Two women, though to be the wives of the men, drove to the golf club shortly after the accident and became hysterical when they learned of the crash.

WITNESS PLACES HOPPE AT SCENE OF SLAYING

The state's long-shielded star witness, testifying today in Superior Court at Dedham, where Stephen Hoppe is on trial for the murder of Patrolman Alfred N. Hollis of Quincy on the early morning of October 4, 1927, placed Hoppe at the scene of the crime.

This witness, whose name has been kept secret by the authorities for months, proved to be Joseph E. Lund, 21, of Narragansett rd., Quincy, a market employe.

In a driving rain at 2 o'clock on the morning of the murder, Lund said, he saw a man in a doorway of the building behind which Patrolman Hollis was later slain.

"Do you see that man now?" he was asked by the prosecutor.

"Yes" was the answer.

"Where?"

HOOVER REPUDIATES 'RUM-ROME' LETTER

Washington, Sept. 29—Herbert Hoover is profiting by political history that was made 44 years ago by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Dickerson Burchard.

No sooner did the Republican candidate learn today of a letter attacking "rum and Romanism" sent out on his behalf by a Virginia woman, than he flatly and emphatically repudiated the letter and the sentiment it contained.

Mr. Hoover reiterated today that neither he nor the Republican party wanted support on the basis of the religious issue.

His declaration was in amplification of the statement made last night and was as follows:

"I cannot fully express my indignation at any such circulars. Nor can I reiterate too strongly that religious questions have no part in this campaign. I have repeatedly stated that neither I nor the Republican party wants support on that basis.

"There are important and vital reasons for the defeat of the Republican administration, but this is not one of them."

The letter repudiated by Mr. Hoover was sent out by Mrs. Willis W. Caldwell, Republican national committeewoman from Virginia.

The letter, as given by Mrs. Lyon, is as follows:

"Dear Madam—I am pleased to know that you have been named vice-chairman of your precinct. I feel sure you are anxious to do everything in your power to elect the splendid ticket, Hoover and

G. O. P. CONCLAVE HEARS COOLIDGE BACK HOOVER

The first public endorsement by President Coolidge of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover as his successor, and a message of appreciation from the G. O. P. standard bearer, featured the harmonious Republican State Convention held in Symphony Hall today.

"I am happy," wired Hoover, "to have this opportunity to thank the Republicans of Massachusetts, the great home state of Calvin Coolidge, for the militant effort and splendid support which they are according me. Victory this year must result from a united and aggressive campaign. That you realize this is evidenced by your actions. I am deeply appreciative."

The only ripple in the smooth proceedure occurred when an attempt was made to substitute the name of Charles L. Burrill, former State treasurer, for that of Edward G. Graves as a presidential elector, which was overwhelmingly defeated.

The keynote speech was delivered by Governor Fuller, just out of a sick bed, who endorsed all the Republican candidates and made a strong plea for party regularity.

Other addresses were made by various candidates for State office, and by Ogden L. Mills, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who reviewed the record of the Republican administration, and contrasted its

IDENTIFIES PRISONER IN COURT

"In the prisoner's cage—Mr. Hoppe," said the witness.

Under cross-examination by Atty. James T. Cassidy, Lund admitted he did not tell anybody about this incident until five months after the slaying.

He admitted, moreover, that he did not get "a good look" at the man's features.

The death bullet that sped through the heart of the Quincy policeman as he tried to trap a safe robber in a Hancock st. hardware store was produced in court today, but Hoppe, ever cool, seemed actually bored as it was fingered and identified by Police Capt. Daniel H. Doran.

IDENTIFIES HOPPE

When Lund took the stand he told of going to the Brockton fair the night of October 3, 1927, with his chum, a Mr. Westberg, arriving there after 11 and leaving Brockton after midnight and arriving in Quincy, going to Thompson's lunch about 1 a. m., October 4. They stayed there half an hour, he said, then drove up Hancock st. toward School st., stopping opposite the Peerless garage, across the street from Pill Bros.' hardware store.

Witness said that Westberg went into the garage and borrowed a wrench to loosen the windshield and that it was raining very hard.

Q.—What time was that? A.—About 2 o'clock.

Q.—What did you do after that? A.—Westberg took cigarettes from his pocket and handed me one, but we didn't have any matches.

Q.—Did you see anybody in the vicinity? A.—Yes, a man in the doorway of the Star garage, in the same building as Pill Bros.' store.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I crossed the street and asked the man for a match. He gave me a few, but didn't say anything. I lit a cigaret right there, remarking it was a stormy night. But the man didn't make any answer.

Q.—Can you describe that man? A.—He was good looking and had sharp eyes. He limped on his left foot.

The prosecutor leaned forward and asked dramatically: "Do you see that man now?"

Lund nodded toward the prisoner's cage and said, casually: "Yes, right over there."

Q.—Where? A.—In the prisoner's cage there—Mr. Hoppe.

TRIP TO VERMONT

Q.—Did you make a trip to Windsor, Vt., after October 4? A.—Yes. With Lieut. Fallon, a State detective, and Westberg.

Q.—Did you see a man at Windsor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—In the prison.

Q.—Who else was at the prison with you? A.—Those I mentioned and Warden McDermott.

Q.—What was the last place you looked at before you were to make observations of a lineup? A.—At the mess hall.

R.—Could you see the yard? A.—Yes, about 75 or 80 men were there working.

Q.—Did you see anybody come out of a building? A.—Yes, two men, one ahead of the other.

Q.—Was anything said as to what was going to happen? A.—No.

Q.—Were you to make your observation there? A.—No.

Q.—Did you recognize either one of the two? A.—Yes, the man in the lead.

Q.—Who was it? A.—Mr. Hoppe.

Cross-examination by Atty. Cassidy:

Q.—Where did you work October 4, 1927? A.—In Quincy.

Q.—What job did you have before that? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where did you work? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What kind of work did you do? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—Do you actually mean to tell me that you don't remember where you worked or what work you did? A.—I can't remember.

KEPT NO RECORD

Q.—Did you ever keep a record of where you worked A.—No.

Q.—Did you keep a record of these things you have testified to? A.—No.

Q.—You never moved from Quincy did you? A.—No.

Q.—What time did you get to the Brockton Fair? A.—Near 11.

Q.—Don't you know? A.—I don't know exactly.

Q.—What day of the fair was it? A.—The first day.

Q.—How do you know, did you look it up? A.—No.

Q.—How do you place the time that you went to the fair or got back? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you look at a watch or any timepiece? A.—No.

Q.—Then you're guessing at the time, aren't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long have you known Westberg? A.—Three years.

Q.—Was he your pal, your chum? A.—Yes.

Q.—Does he live in Quincy now? A.—No, he moved to Springfield.

Q.—Have you seen him lately? A.—No.

Q.—When did you last see him? A.—Last Sunday.

Q.—Do you read the newspapers? A.—No.

Q.—Haven't you read anything in the papers about this case? A.—No.

Q.—Are you sure you didn't read the newspapers? A.—I read the headlines, that's all.

Lund admitted he said nothing about the man he saw until March, 16, 1928, and even then did not speak until called to the Quincy police station and asked if he had seen a man on Hancock st. that night.

He said he did not get a good look at the man's face as he lighted his cigarette. Although he worked in the pressroom of a Quincy paper and lived in Quincy he said he did not know whether there was talk of a reward for the capture of the policeman's slayer.

On the way to Windsor, Vt., State prison, did anybody say anything to you?" he was asked and replied: "Police Lieut. Fallon said, 'You are going to identify the man you saw in the picture and you think you saw at Pill Brothers.'"

MOTHER AND 2 KILLED BY GAS

Stuer found that gas was escaping from a wall jet under a radio set in the mopboard. He shut it off.

Reaching the house a few minutes later, Dr. Conleon and the firemen worked for more than an hour in the upstairs rooms before giving up hope.

Police found that the doors on both sides of the living room were closed. The daybed, police said, had been moved to the room from another part of the house. The boy and girl had individual bedrooms, which were opened last night.

Police declared also that investigation disclosed that the petcock on the mopboard jet turned with difficulty from disuse. No appliance was found, they said, that could be connected with this jet.

Police Capt. Charles R. Voss notified Dr. Read, the medical examiner, who went to the house and made an examination of the bodies.

'DEMS.' CHOOSE 18 ELECTORS

Mrs. Andrew J. Peters, wife of Boston's former mayor, and Arthur W. Wyman of Waltham were the presidential electors-at-large chosen today at the Democratic State convention. Those selected by Congressional districts were:

Daniel England, Fitchburg; Ray Stannard Baker, Amherst; Marcus A. Coolidge, Fitchburg; Thomas J. Barrett, Worcester; Humphrey O'Sullivan, Lowell; Laurence F. Dodge, Newburyport; Margaret E. Wales, Lawrence; James G. Cassedy, Cambridge; Mathew B. Smith, Chelsea; Felix Mandile, Somerville; Dorothy K. Gwinn, Boston; William F. Foley, Boston; Samuel Zolotsky, Boston; Frank J. Donahue, Boston; Edmund P. Talbot, Fall River; James F. Doran, New Bedford.

FLAYS DRY ACT, LAUD SMITH

Governor Smith's speech of acceptance was ratified.

Several labor planks were included. They reaffirmed the principal of collective bargaining, condemned abuse of injunctions, demanded the State pay never less than a saving wage to employes, demanded a study of the department of labor and industry to correct abuses, and protection of women and children from exploitation in labor and industry.

Wider highways in the State were favored. A scientifically devised system of old age pensions was demanded as was an amendment to the workingmen's compensation act, providing payment of compensation for life in cases of permanent disability.

There were 1100 delegates present when the convention was called to order shortly after noon, one hour and a half late in starting because the resolutions committee failed to meet at the appointed time and was not prepared to present its recommendations.

As Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic State committee, rapped his gavel calling the convention to order, a band did justice to "The Sidewalks of New York."

The spectacle of a personage formerly high in the State ranks of the Republican party addressing a Democratic convention in the interests of its presidential nominee drew a great burst of applause as former Mayor Dodge spoke.

"Despite past denials and diversions, national prohibition is now an issue and will continue to be so until the question is definitely settled," he said. "Prohibition is not properly a federal question. We may not dispute the power of the country arbitrarily to make it so, but it is contrary to all political logic when entered into the framing of the constitution.

"The 18th amendment and the Volstead Act have brought about a condition so poisonous to public service, so destructive to morals and so dangerous in general effect that we can almost believe their hearty supporters would seek repeal if they fully realized conditions."

NO SOFT PEDAL HERE.

Dodge's direct indorsement of Governor Smith's own principles on the liquor issue took even the convention itself by surprise, as there had been much talk before hand that the prohibition issue would be "soft pedaled" during the meeting.

"The seething mass of corruption coming to the surface from that foul mass below, propelled by its own putrification, demonstrates what is going on in prohibition enforcement," Dodge continued.

"Violation of law by every strata of society—stills in households, venders growing rich from unlawful traic, prideful youth with pocket flasks which in other days would blast their reputations—such is the fruit of this tree, baneful as that which brought forth the original downfall of man."

WALSH SEES VICTORY

Senator Walsh, who remained but a short time because of an engagement at the Soldiers' Home in Norton, attacked the monopolies he charged were fostered by the Republicans at Washington and which, if allowed to continue, would mean "the death of the great middle class."

He declared the Republican party was conducting a campaign of fear, charge of prohibition enforcement appealing to religious bodies to defeat the Democratic candidate is now a spectacle to be resented by our people."

The charge that Lieut.-Gov. Allen, "by training, environment and actual connection, is tied up with big business," was voiced by Gen. Cole, his Democratic opponent for the gubernatorial election.

The most prolonged applause of the convention greeted Mrs. Francis R. Sayre, daughter of former President Wilson, upon her appointment to a committee. Delegates and audience stood and their plaudits resounded in the temple for several minutes.

Another former mayor, Andrew J. Peters of Boston, permanent chairman, formed the Republicans a "party of silence and evasion."

LEADER OF VICE SQUAD MARKED FOR 'DEATH'

Special Officer Oliver P. Garrett of the vice and liquor squad was today reported to be marked for death, with $5000 placed upon his head by opium den proprietors of Boston's Chinatown.

Police officials learned of the alleged murder-plot through Garrett himself, who received the "tip off" from a "stool" in the Chinatown district.

Garrett works at the head of a squad of five patrolmen who, within the last two years, have been active in liquor and drug raids and who have made 306 raids on Chinatown within the last few months.

Garrett was marked for death Thursday night, according to his informant. Three thousand dollars had been raised and tongmen brought in to the city to accomplish the slaying, he was told.

The special officer was in the Chinatown district Thursday night and was unmolested. Shues then the "ante" has been raised to $5000, the "stool" declared.

The police department is taking no special precautions to protect Garrett's life.

Nearly 1000 men on twelve United States destroyers are due for disappointment when they apply for their pay next Monday at New London, unless something happens to release their paymaster, Charles MacKinnon, who was sentenced today in East Cambridge court to spend six months in the House of Correction as a hit-and-run driver.

MacKinnon of Everett was arrested early in the week on the charge. When he appeared for trial he had in his possession records of accounts of $130,000 to be paid navy boys in New London on Monday.

Naval officers in court pointed out that these records with MacKinnon were absolutely necessary in New London if the men were to be paid. Asst. Dist. Atty. Warren L. Golden Wedding Auto on Journey to Hub

Portland, Me., Sept. 29 (en route to Boston with eight golden wedding couples from Milo, Me.)—If a body kiss a body coming through the Rye, why should all the flappers cry?

"Because the young folks today don't even know how to kiss so it will keep a husband happy for 43 years," replies "Grandpa" John Dillon, 84, who illustrated the true sweetheart's kiss on blushing "Ma" Dillon for Governor Ralph Brewster and his wife and staff when they lunched at the Blaine mansion in Augusta with seven other golden wedding couples enroute from their home town, Milo, to the Hotel Statler in Boston.

"In our courting days there was no petting and loving to cheapen love," said "Ma" Dillon, who is 82. "We married because we really loved each other enough to overlook each others faults. We took each other for life and worked side by side to cultivate the contentment which keeps love alive."

The golden wedding couples were up early for the long motor trip to Boston today and bid their comrades, the Rev. Sylvanus E. Frobock, pastor of the United Baptist Church of Milo, and Mrs. Manley G. Bracket, wife of the town's retired grocer, godspeed on their airplane ride to the Hub.

Bracket is 71 and his wife 72. She thinks the only way to keep a man happy through the ups and downs of half a century of wedded life is to let him think that he is boss and use plenty of "soft soap" when she wants to be boss, feed him well and save his money.

Mrs. Frobock, who married the Baptist minister 54 years ago, is 73 years young, while her husband is 74. The cardinal virtue of married people must be patience, she believes, and says that this comes with children, and that makes it easier to bear and forbear.

A. V. Carey said the only way to be happy is to be good to each other "just as good as you know how to be," and Mrs. Carey, who wed h'm 52 years ago, nods emphatic approval. She is 73 and he is one year older.

The automobile is Dan Cupid's worst enemy in the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Martin, 75 and 73, respectively, who plighted their vows 53 years ago when "Jimmy" was a dashing handsome young barber and former schoolmate.

W. W. Leonard, 76, who wed his wife 56 years ago, started out suspiciously by letting her not only have the last word in every argument but have all the talking to herself "until she run down talking and stopped herself." His wife is 74.

"Jimmy" Shaw was the best blacksmith in town when he married his wife, now 74, in the old home town 56 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. I. P. Deane, whose wedding was solemnized just 50 years ago, warned against companionate marriages as unfair to the children. "We don't know what we would do without our three fine sons and our grandchildren," she said.

TRAMP, ONCE RICH, JAILED

WIFE'S ILLNESS TOOK $40,000 OF CIRCUS MAN

A shambling, unkempt figure of a man, unshaven and with clothes in tatters, stood before Judge Avery in Quincy district court and heard the judge sentence him to six months in the Norfolk County jail at Dedham, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

The man was Robert H. Moores.

Twenty years ago, Robert H. Moores stood in cap and gown on the graduation platform at King's College at Windsor, Ontario, and proudly received his degree granted cum laude—with honor. The world was at his feet. His mother was a noted Canadian painter—she furnished the young graduate with ample funds as he faced forth into the world.

Robert H. Moores selected the show business as his life's work. He was a success. Within a few years' time he was treasurer of the Sells-Floto circus and was making a name for himself.

Ten years ago Robert H. Moores had $40,000 in the bank. He owned a handsome home on Berwick rd., Medford. He had as his bride a beautiful young bareback rider from the circus. She gave up the showfast trail to preside over the Medford home.

Then came a son to the home, but the child died in infancy. The wife was taken ill. Doctors shook their heads and announced that they feared her malady was incurable.

It was suggested, however, that

RESCUES 2 FROM DROWNING AT QUINCY

A thrilling double rescue from drowning was effected today at the Community Beach in Quincy when Adrian McKinnon, address unknown, swam fully clothed into the water off that point and brought ashore Phyllis Sullivan, 4½ years old, and her would-be savior, James Odroyd, 60 Avalon st., Quincy.

Odroyd, a night worker at a local shipyard, was asleep in bed when the screams of a woman at the beach awakened him. Rushing to a bedroom window he saw Joseph, the 7-year-old brother of Phyllis frantically trying to attract attention to his little sister in the water, and without waiting to don clothing ran down to the beach and dove after the girl.

Within a few feet of reaching her, Odroyd was seized with cramps and his cries for help were heard by McKinnon, passing the vicinity at the time. Diving after the endangered couple, McKinnon succeeded in grasping both and carrying them both safely to shore.

Phyllis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sullivan, Lawn st., Quincy.

IMPORTANT WEDDING TODAY

Eloise Lawrence Becomes Bride of Harrison Gardner

SEPTEMBER OF 1928 marches merrily into the limbo of countless yesterdays, strutting a romantic measure attuned to Lohengrin-Mendelssohn refrains. Today was remarkably busy for the boutonniere brigade drafted for usher duty at the brilliant wedding festival uniting Miss Eloise Lawrence and Harrison Gardner in wedlock's bonds. Smart young men in full panoply of what's correct for the autumn wedding escorted dowagers to their places and saw to it that debutantes had advantageous seats in Ascension Memorial Church for the noon ceremonial. The whole social world of super-consequential ones was bidden to the bridal that was writ down brightly in the great gilt scroll of fashionable alliances.

DAVID SEARS, EDWIN BIBLEY WEBSTER, JR., Arthur Hobson, Chandler Bigelow, Richard C. Storey, Jr., Walter Amory, Luke B. Lockwood, Amory Lawrence, Standish Bradford, James Lee, Daniel Holder, George Walker, Frederick Sheffield and H. Wainwright Howe did the honors with aplomb and suavity, being youthful cosmopolites versed in such duties as weddings and receptions necessitate. James Reynolds was best man and chief support at the altar where the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence and the Rev. Endicott Peabody pronounced the solemn words uniting the daughter of the John S. Lawrences with the son of the Philip Gardners.

SWEET FACED AND GOLDEN TRESSED, THE BRIDE NEVER looked lovelier than on her wedding day in her bridal finery. A beautiful gleaming gown of ivory white satin and its gossamer burden of fragile laces set off the wedding's central figure exquisitely. A modernistic touch and the grace of medieval days combined in the gown. Slender panels of rare old lace fell each side of the double train that swung, not from the shoulders, in the court fashion, but from the waist, in the old-new mode brides favor in this season of picturesque attire. Tulle for the wedding veil frothed out in misty beauty, and bride flowers of white added fragrance to a lovely ensemble.

BRIDESMAIDS, THE VERY LAST WORD IN TODAY'S MODE, wore transparent velvets with slashed skirts. Yellow was the color, a most happy selection when goldenrod flaunts from every Myopia hillside and the country is putting on its bright reds and burnt golds to welcome autumn. In honor place, the bride's younger sister, Miss Isobel Lawrence, headed the bridesmaids contingent. Otherwise, it was composed of smart contemporaries of the bride—Miss Ellen Bohlen, just back from a summertime in Europe; Miss Virginia Gardner, the bridegroom's sister; Miss Emily Coolidge, a cousin of the bride in the paternal line; Miss Evelyn Boyce, a sister debutante; Miss Edith Wolcott and Miss Emily Davis, also in that category. They are girls who wear frocks well and know exactly how to step that trying slow march perfectly.

TO DEFINE THE SOCIAL STATUS OF BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM in Social Registerish way, it suffices to note membership of the bride in Chilton and Vincent Clubs and the Junior League. As for the bridegroom, his Harvard pourree brought a 1924 sheepskin and membership in Porcellian and Harvard Clubs. Add thereto the Tennis and Racquet and the Eastern Yacht and his interests and affiliations are definitely set forth. The bride is prominently identified with the sport fraternity of Myopians. She rides to hounds with the best of them and puts her hunters over the jumps when Society gives a horse show. Famous old "Wiggin" has an honored place in the John Lawrence stables and heads the entire string as a blue ribboner.

CATCH AN ENTHUSIASTIC YOUNG HORSEMAN OF THE Hugh Bancroft, Jr., stamp missing a horse show. He, along with the fraternity that moves from show to show, has next on the list the big Brockton event. And perhaps the new Bancroft possession named "Theda Bara" will be shown in the lists there. She is a "model saddle horse" and so ranked at Worcester. Passing from the ownership of Frank Hopewell she now resides, along with other steeds, at the Bancroft stables at Cohasset. Mrs. Dan Hanna is bringing her horses to Brockton. The absence of Miss Joan Brown Scott from the show eliminates a picturesque feature. Miss Scott holding the reins over a prancing four and looking [illegible] handsome in the box seat of a shining coach. They say Miss Scott string is being sold and that Miss Scott's interest in fine [illegible] is not so keen as of yore.

SOMETHING ON THE HILL" IS INVARIABLY SOUGHT AS domicile for the newlyweds or those just about to become [illegible] weds. If not something on "the Hill" itself then choice ranges [illegible] instantly through that quiet, London-like section nestling quietly between the Hill and the Basin. Miss Helen Rhodes when she shall have become Mrs. Lloyd DeWitt Brace plans to be at home on the intimates at No. 100 Chestnut st. in an apartment of exquisite appointments quite all the bride hopes for and desires. The Rhodes-Brace nuptials illumine October's first Saturday with ceremonial aura and interest a large cross-section of the fashionable world. St. John's Church in Beverly Farms for the wedding vows and the Essex County Club for feasting and dancing is a proper wedding program.

THE LITTLE BIRD ON THE BOUGH TWITTERING OF THIS and that romance has something to say of wedding bells soon to ring for George Higginson, 2d, and Miss Virginia Oakes. These young people with their popularity and enormously important family connection really ought to stage a big church ceremonial all pomp and circumstance, such as alliances between wealth and station deserve. Two weddings celebrated in the Oakes family were the small and intimate sort, one by which Miss Mary Francis Oakes became Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell having its locale in Paris, and the other, uniting Miss Elisabeth Oakes with Sidney Jones Colford, Jr., taking place at the Oakes home, "Southwood," in Brookline. Perhaps Miss Virginia will ring a change in the scheme and give her vows in taper-lighted church to muted organ strains.

Mary Childs — Constance Percival — Ellen Bohlen

SMART YOUNG GIRLS PROMINENT IN THE SOCIAL SCHEME

Miss Frost wears a superb ermine and sable wrap at a fashion fete, and demonstrated how beautifully these two priceless furs may blend in feminine adornment for ball and opera; Miss Percival in trim autumn rig of golden tan; Miss Ellen Mohlen, one of the attendants at the marriage of Miss Eloise Lawrence and Harrison Gardner today.

AND IT MAY BE THAT YOUNG MR. HIGGINSON WILL establish his bride in a Chestnut st. apartment, perhaps the one his mother has occupied since she relinquished an enormous Beacon st. mansion and a large staff of servants for the more up-to-date and smaller home. Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, mater to the young man who is to wed with Miss Oakes, goes to California for the winter, so it all fits into the scheme very nicely that son and daughter-in-law have the Boston apartment. Mrs. Bernard Rogers, the former Miss Corinna Higginson, completes a several weeks' North Shore stay and departs for her Chicago home.

SCHOOLBOYS OF THE PREP AGE COME WANDERING home one by one from summers abroad. Ellery Sedgwick, son of the senior of that name, has been gathering knowledge and recreation in the popular way, via the tour through foreign countries and into strange spots. The Sedgwicks make a long season at "Long Hill" in the wooded Montserrat section. James Mandell tours Europe in the interval between junior and senior years at Harvard. The Cramos, father and son, Richard T., Jr., and Cornelius, are at magnificent "Castle Hill" after one of their frequent ocean crossings. The family went over only a short time ago, almost as soon as "Castle Hill" had received its house warming. The Crane place in Ipswich defies description and uses up an entire supply of superlatives.

YOUNGSTERS NOT YET 17 WILL, ON COLUMBUS DAY afternoon, have opportunity to show their ponies' paces. Harness and saddle ponies fill 13 classes and there are, also, four novelty events, the handkerchief and potato races, the balloon fight and musical chairs. The show is to be staged on the Charles River Speedway and there are trophies in every class. There should be a great outpouring of children for the events staged entirely for them and their mounts. J. P. Wescott of Waltham is receiving entries.

JAIL ONCE RICH MAN AS TRAMP

the young circus official take his wife into the country. He went to Newton, New Hampshire, and purchased a farm. From that time on fate has dealt one cruel blow after another to him.

The $50,000 that had been in the bank dwindled. The home in Medford was sold for $15,000, and this money gradually disappeared. Finally all the money was gone.

Finally Moores, reduced to penury, came to Boston looking for work. He tramped the streets for days without finding employment. His wife was still ill on the New Hampshire farm.

On Thursday night, Moores, penniless, hungry and discouraged, approached a policeman in Milton. He asked the most direct route to Newton, N. H. His appearance stamped him as a hobo.

When he was taken before Judge Avery the man, his mind evidently numbed by his hardships, pleaded guilty to the charge without telling the judge the tragic story of his life. After he was sentenced, he talked to newspaper reporters.

10,000 AT MAINE AIR CARNIVAL

Portland, Me., Sept. 29—Ten thousand aviation enthusiasts braved biting winds and a falling thermometer to witness the events on the second day of the dedicatory exercises of the new Portland airport today.

In the OX-5 contest, P. H. Spencer of Hartford, piloting a Thomas-Morse Special, negotiated the distance in 3m. 10s. H. K. McMahon, in a Curtis Robin, was second in 3m. 49s. Capt. Albert L. Edson of Dennison Airport, third in 5m. 54s.

The 15-mile cabin plane race was won by John Rogerson of Massachusetts Airways, who brought his Ryan Brougham home in 9m. 11 5-8s. Capt. Leroy D'Arcy of Old Colony Airways was second, 3m. 22 1-8s. Capt. Albert L. Edson third, 3m. 25⅝s.

From an altitude of 1000 feet, with a dead motor, H. K. MaMahon in a Curtis Robin came within 47 feet of a 100-foot circle placed in the center of the field and thereby won the "dead stick" landing contest; George Berry, 83 feet away was second, and Ralph Barrow, 152 feet away, was third.

WEDDING HOAX CHEATS 2 COPS OUT OF $10

Two Revere patrolmen, "hunkeed" out of $5 apiece for special duty at a wedding scheduled to take place last night at the local city hall, turned detectives on their off-time today to discover the perpetrators of the marital hoax.

From 5 o'clock till 9 o'clock, in the chill of evening, Officers Henry J. Blackmar and Joseph O'Rourke, promised $5 each for the special detail of attendance upon wedding festivities at the municipal auditorium, waited in vain for the bridal party and finally closed their tour of duty without even the sight of an orange blossom.

Their chagrin was shared by "Zeke" Murray, janitor and custodian of City Hall, who spent a hectic afternoon draping the auditorium with wedding bells and other appropriate decorations.

Murray, however, has the jump on the pair of disappointed police for he collected $15 in advance on the decoration order.

According to City Hall records, a man who gave the name of Andrew Tamasi of Clark rd., Revere, paid the required advance fee for hire of the auditorium, but his name does not appear among recent applicants for marriage license in that city.

Inquiries at the Clark rd. address given by Tamasi disclosed he was not at home nor have the local police been successful in locating him.

Meanwhile, Officers Blackmar and O'Rourke have succeeded in securing a copy of the ancient song "Waiting at the Church" and are already practising it for appearances at future entertainments in suburban police circles.

NEWTON BOY, WALKING IN SLEEP, FOUND BY OFFICER

All in his sleep, 9-year-old Nicholas de Stefano of Lincoln rd., Newton, got up shortly before daylight today, dressed, left the house and was walking in the middle of the road at Watertown and Adams st. when Patrolman Charlton found him.

The policeman thought the boy looked as if he was asleep and he took his hand and questioned him. The boy awoke and was startled to find himself with a policeman, but he soon recovered and told who he was. Charlton took him home.

SMITH ATTACKS DRY LAWS TONIGHT

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 29—Governor Smith brought his presidential candidacy into Wisconsin today and tonight in the city auditorium Smith will bring to a close his western speaking tour.

He will speak on prohibition. He deliberately chose Milwaukee, the former brewing capital of America, as the spot in which to explain his ideas of prohibition reform.

"I will speak about the 18th amendment and the Volstead act," said the Governor. The speech will be broadcast by a nation-wide radio hookup.

Milwaukeeans said that no candidate for the presidency has ever had the reception Milwaukee gave Smith. Thousands surrounded the station when he arrived and other thousands packed the streets for two miles to see him.

Red fire burned along the curbs, and as this did not give light enough, the Democratic nominee stood in an open car most of the way with a searchlight playing upon him.

Reports as to Governor Smith's ability to carry the State in November very according to the informant. The betting today was even money, with not much money being wagered either way.

Senator "Young" Bob LaFollette has thus far maintained silence concerning the presidential race. But most of his friends are working tooth and nail for Smith. Senator John J. Blaine, LaFollette's colleague at Washington and former Governor, has come out for Smith.

Herman E. Kern, new chairman of the State committee, and an old LaFollette lieutenant, is diplomatically cool to the Hoover candidacy. While neither he nor LaFollette has endorsed Smith, it is well known that their friends are supporting the Democratic nominee.

It is into such a situation that Governor Smith stepped today hopeful of carrying the State in November and that his speech tonight will help him along the road. Milwaukee is wet and so is Wisconsin.

Smith will spend two nights in Milwaukee, the longest time he has tarried anywhere since setting forth on his western journey two weeks ago. He will not leave Milwaukee until 12:30 p. m. Sunday afternoon for Rochester and the New York Democratic State convention.

SMITH FACES A SETBACK IN REED'S WITHDRAWAL

New York, Sept. 29—Democratic prospects in Missouri suffered a severe set-back today with the announcement of Senator James A. Reed, militant patriarch of his party, that he would be able to take only a "limited" part in the campaign.

The requirements of an important piece of litigation in which he has been engaged for years compelled withdrawal of his previous offer to serve the national committee consistently until election day, Reed said in a letter to Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, chairman of the Speakers' Bureau.

Divorced, They Split Custody of Pet Dog Between Them

Out of court since then they have made an amicable arrangement regarding custody.

SETS RECORD BY FLYING UPSIDE DOWN 18 MINS.

Kassel, Germany, Sept. 29 (AB)—Pilot Clardon, young Swiss flier, achieved what was described as a world record for flying upside down today, but on landing was taken out of his machine more dead than alive.

He flew upside down for 18 minutes and 58 seconds, beating the record set by the German flier Fiesler by nearly four minutes.

Clardon is stated to have turned his machine over at an altitude of about 150 yards and then rose to an altitude of about 700 yards when the blood pressure in his head became so severe and his legs so cramped that only by a last desperate effort was he able to right the machine and to glide to earth.

REACTION TO SMITH TOUR IS PRO-HOOVER, ANALYST SAYS

AL TRAILS IN POLL OF CORN BELT

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Noted Political Analyst

Chicago, Sept. 29—Reaction to Governor Smith's swing through the Middle West is distinctly pro-Hoover in the five corn belt states of North and South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, as disclosed in the Hearst nation-wide poll.

The most interesting figures perhaps, of all the States are those in Nebraska, where Governor Smith delivered his first speech of the circle and devoted himself entirely to farm relief.

The Nebraska tabulation today gives Hoover 4912 to 3181 for Smith, or 60 percent of the total.

While the race is much tighter in Omaha, the outstate vote, as of today, due in a measure to the two-to-one vote of the women for Hoover, indicates that Governor Smith will lose the State, despite the strong effort to win over the La Follette following of four years ago to the Tammany camp.

RASKOB'S THEORY

It was the theory of the New York strategists, and particularly Raskob, that Nebraska was fertile field by virtue of the late La Follette vote in 1924, and the ailing of Senator George Norris, who has refrained thus far from saying anything complimentary about Hoover while displaying unusual charity in his observations concerning Governor Smith.

Senator Howell, who is seeking reelection this fall, is, however, going along with the Hoover Curtis ticket.

But what is upsetting the Democratic figuring in Nebraska, it appears, is the apparent defection of Democratic women voters. The poll indicates that, while Smith will fall only to a considerable percentage of the La Follette strength, there is no counting the vote as a whole behind the Tammany forces.

The Smith-Robinson ticket is going to suffer a serious loss of the normal Democratic majority, it appears, in Herbert Hoover's record as an administrator.

At any rate, that is clearly understood in the analysis of the statistics set out in the Hearst poll as of today.

FIGHT IS CLOSE

What may develop in this State in the closing weeks of the campaign is conjecture, of course, but if present trends are maintained Nebraska seems headed for the G. O. P. fold, though not by anything approaching an overwhelming vote. The fight at present is rather close. It is likely to be so on November 6.

It is worthy of chronicling, perhaps, that while Hoover is polling about 60 per cent of the total vote in the Hearst canvass, he is being supported two-to-one by the women voters.

The total vote today in the five states, with the division of the women vote indicated, stands:

Hearst Papers' NATION-WIDE POLL

platform with that of the Democrats.

"The platform, which endorsed that adopted at the national convention, and commended the administration of President Coolidge and Governor Fuller, went through without difficulty. It pledged vigorous enforcement of the Constitution, but failed to mention prohibition.

With the exception of the attempt made by Sherwin L. Cook to force Burrill's name on to the slate, the list of electors was also adopted without debate. They consist of two electors at large and 14 from districts, several women being included in the list as follows:

At large, Mabel G. Batchelder, Worcester, and John Richardson of Canton, Hoover campaign manager in Massachusetts; First district, Oscar G. La Montagne, Mahtekeag; Second, Phelps Brown, Springfield; Third, ex-Congressman Calvin D. Paige, Gardner; Fourth, George Burdett, Fairhaven; Fifth, Ravel Beaudreau, Marlboro; Sixth, Elizabeth H. Denham, Salem; Seventh, Josephine Nethercut Eighth, Hildegarde Christensen, Boston; Ninth, Frank A. Ward, Malden; Tenth, Edward P. Graves, Fall River; Eleventh, Mrs. Frederick Winsor, Cambridge; Twelfth, Mrs. Lyman Rhoades, Dedham; Thirteenth, E. Mark Sullivan, Boston; counsel, Brighton; Fourteenth, Amelia F. Bleiberg, Attleboro; Fifteenth, Carl A. Perry, Fall River; Sixteenth, Bertha Packard, Fairhaven.

There were 2200 delegates present and the galleries were filled when the presiding officer, Thomas Prescott, chairman of the Republican State committee, called the convention to order.

COOLIDGE'S MESSAGE

The most important feature of the proceedings was the reading of President Coolidge's message, which was as follows:

"Although it seems a long time since I have attended a Republican State convention in Massachusetts, my interest in the purposes for which they assemble has not diminished, but rather increased and was never greater than in the present campaign.

"Its membership represents an organization with a long history of important achievements in the field of sound government which has carried incalculable benefits to every one.

"Our country needs the continuation of the administration of public affairs in accordance with those principles which have secured the result.

"This need should be fulfilled by beginning the next administration under the tried and experienced leadership of Frank G. Allen and R. Loring Young in our Commonwealth and Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis in our nation.

"To our convention assembled for the accomplishment of these ends, I send my cordial greetings."

FULLER'S KEYNOTE

Governor Fuller, who for several days past has been confined to his summer home at Rye, N. H., with a heavy cold, delivered the keynote speech in which he said in part:

"This convention finds our party united, and a united Republican party has never known defeat. The seven years just passed have seen the nation's affairs administered by a Massachusetts president.

"Common sense, straight thinking and fair dealing have been the distinctive marks of the administration. There never has been a moment's doubt that the public expenditures would be rigidly examined, nor has there been any uncertainty that the financial business of the country would be unduly hampered by governmental interference or meddling. During these seven years the country has experienced a period of prosperity unsurpassed by any nation in the world's history."

After extolling the record of the Republican party, Gov. Fuller expressed his appreciation for the opportunity for service which has been given him.

EULOGIZES ALLEN

He delivered a glowing eulogium of Lieut.-Gov. Allen, declaring his confidence of his election and that he will give the state a fine administration. R. Loring Young, candidate for the U. S. Senate, and Governor characterized as a coming rival of Charles Sumner and Daniel Webster, and William S. Youngman as a good treasurer whom he believes will make a fine lieutenant governor.

R. Loring Young was given an enthusiastic reception when he rose to speak. He said the Republican Party has entered the campaign with confidence that its record of accomplishments both in the state and nation merits and will receive the approval of the people of Massachusetts. He extolled the Republican governors, McCall, Coolidge, Cox and Fuller, challenging anyone to find better records, paid tribute to Lieut.-Gov. Allen, and referring to the national platform said the party stands on the record of Calvin Coolidge.

This record he said was featured by "economy in the administration of government, reduction of taxes and debts, and an administration strong and incorruptible as the Vermont hills."

William E. Whiting of Holyoke, newly appointed Secretary of Commerce, was present at the convention.

Hoover Urged to Speak in Boston October 20

Washington, Sept. 29 (AP)—Herbert Hoover is being urged by some of his advisers to deliver his Boston address, last of his Eastern campaign, on the night of October 20, instead of on the middle of the week following, as has been announced tentatively.

Should he consent, he would make three major speeches on three successive Saturdays, carrying his campaign into two Democratic strongholds, New York city and Boston on the last two of them. Saturday, Oct. 6, he will speak in Elizabethtown, Tenn.

G. O. P. Platform Skirts Rum and Religion

Following is the platform adopted without a dissenting voice at the Republican State convention in Symphony Hall today:

We, the Republican party of Massachusetts, in convention assembled, desire, first of all, publicly to record our whole-hearted appreciation of the great leadership of our Republican President of Massachusetts, Calvin Coolidge. We endorse without qualification the record of the Coolidge administration.

We endorse and ratify the Republican national platform of 1928.

We reaffirm our confidence and trust in the government of Massachusetts as administered by Republican governors with the co-operation of Republican legislatures. We are proud to compare the record of our grand old Commonwealth during the 10 years since the World War with that of any other state in the Union. New York, for example, during that 10-year period, increased her cost of government 197 per cent, while the increase in Massachusetts was but 42 per cent.

URGE TARIFF REVISION

During the same period New York increased her net debt 48 per cent, while hers our net debt was reduced 66 per cent. During these years Calvin Coolidge, Channing H. Cox and Alvan T. Fuller, Republicans, were the governors of Massachusetts and during eight of these ten years Alfred E. Smith, Democrat, was the Governor of New York. The Republican party in Massachusetts pledges itself to a continuance of the policies of Coolidge, Cox and Fuller. We offer not promises but accomplishments.

We are indebted to the Republican women of Massachusetts for their ever-increasing party activity and accomplishment.

We reaffirm our unchanging belief in the policy of protecting the American standards of wages and living from competition with the lower standards of other countries. We advocate such a revision of the tariff as will protect Massachusetts industries now suffering from ruinous increasing importations. Such revision can be hoped for only from those who have been consistent friends of the protective policy.

We believe that immigration must continue to be restricted in order to prevent unemployment and to maintain our superior wage levels, but we hold that the immigration laws should be amended to relieve the separation of those bound by close family ties.

We believe in full and generous provision for our disabled veterans and commend the action of Congress in appropriating $750,000,000 annually for the benefit of the veterans of our several wars.

ON RELIGION

We commend the co-operation of our country with other nations for the maintenance of peace through treaties renouncing war, but believe that the United States should not fail of adequate preparedness for defense, and pending further agreements, endorse the maintenance of a navy equal to the full ratio provided for the United States by the Washington treaty for the limitation of naval armament.

We particularly reaffirm the planks of the national platform on labor and agriculture.

We pledge ourselves to the vigorous enforcement of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, and deny the right of anyone to seek to destroy these provisions by nullification or subterfuge.

We agree with our presidential candidate, Herbert Hoover, that "The glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience." We stand today as always for no distinction of race, color, or creed as qualifications for holding public office.

We favor the continuance of our policy of omitting from the party platform all subject matter of referenda.

We approach the coming national and state elections with confidence in the success of the entire Republican ticket, both State and National, and we hail as the next governor of Massachusetts the name of Frank G. Allen; as the next United States senator from this state, the name of R. Loring Young; as the next president of the United States, that great leader of men, Herbert Hoover.

ROBBERS' HAMMERS FAIL TO OPEN SAFE

A safe containing $143 was too strong for safe-crackers to open and after battering it with sledge hammers they rolled it from the Capitol lunch on Union st., Lynn, to a building and dropped it into the basement.

Patrolman Charles Murray discovered the attempted robbery and notified the proprietor, Peter Alexandris, who opened the safe and found its contents intact.

The girl vanished on the way to the Atlantic ave. chocolate factory, where she was employed. Her parents were informed by the girl's friends they have been receiving notes since in Chelsea and Saugus.

Curtis," which our party is so fortunate as to have in the field.

"Mr. Hoover himself and the national committee are depending on the women to save our country in the hour of very grave moral relapses crisis. We must save the United States from being Romanized and rum-ridden, and the call is to the women to do so.

"Will you not please try to get a list of every Republican woman and every Hoover Democratic woman in your town at once precinct? The men will help you, and, if necessary, I think you would be willing to make a house-to-house canvass, distributing literature and finding out how the women feel in this section—would you not?

"We are sending you some cards, will send more literature, if you wish it.

"Will appreciate a reply, giving us an idea at to how your precinct stands—also a list of Hoover women at your precinct to whom we might send literature."

Vehemently repudiating the letter, Hoover declared that, whether authentic or a forgery, the communication did violence to every instinct that he possessed.

"Such an attitude," he said in a prepared statement, "is entirely opposed to every principle of the Republican party. I made my position clear in my acceptance speech when I said:

"'In this land, dedicated to tolerance, we still find outbreaks of intolerances. I come of Quaker stock. My ancestors were persecuted for their beliefs. Here they sought and found religious freedom. By blood and conviction I stand for religious tolerance, both in act and in spirit. The glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.'

"I meant that then and I mean it now."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Well, Maybe We're Wrong

William F. Donahue, of "Take the Air," at the Wilbur, is responsible for the direction of Uno, the trained mule in the show. "I will guarantee to make a performer out of any jackass in one year," is Mr. Donahue's modest claim, which to us sounds suspiciously like a very dirty dig.

Why Bring This Up Now?

Bert Lahr, comedian who plays the easily collapsed box fighter in "Hold Everything," at the Majestic, is discovered reading "A Winter's Tale." "This is the book that put Gene Tunney on his feet," he explains. "Don't kid yerself!" snorts Victor Moore, "It was 'A Long Count.'"

TWO NEW CONDIMENTS IN MUSIC AND MYSTERY TO SEASON DRAMA'S LOCAL DISH

A TALE OF TERROR, they say, is unfolded during the action of "Dracula," the new mystery shocker which comes Monday to the Hollis. Here are Charles Van Sloan and Margot Lester recounting some grisly details of the exceedingly nightmarish story.

VIRGINIA WATSON, fair and fairer than that word, as Hamlet or somebody says, will perform to "The Queen's Taste" Monday at the Shubert. It's a new musical piece.

COUPLE OF BOND SALESMEN? No, sir, but the best tune peddlers in the business. They are Arthur and Morton Havel, the "Heigh-ho Cheerio" boys in "Just a Minute," musical fiesta at Tremont.

PATRICIA CALVERT is the fairest witness to take the stand in "The Bellamy Trial," Mr. Clive's sharp legal battle now a hit at the Copley.

WARY WILLIE! "What's the difference," asks Colette D'Arville of Will Mahoney, "between a Spanish and an American kiss?" And see he, "About five minutes." This is "Take the Air" at the Wilbur.

SETTING THE SPOT FOR GENE BUCK

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

If he had done nothing else in the way of casting enlightenment upon the drama, the discovery of Will Rogers would have called down easy and lasting laurels upon the furrowed brow of Gene Buck. It was a job solemnly undertaken and successfully executed, although it may be questioned whether Mr. Ziegfeld, who gave certain aid and succor to Mr. Buck's explorations in search of talent, really shared the latter's faith in the value of a gum-chewing, lariat tosser to the gorgeous Follies. Mr. Buck won his point with Ziegfeld. In less than a season Rogers proved himself a champion producer of box office pelf and, of course, everybody was happy.

* * *

It has been said that Gene Buck started in life with weak eyes, and finally went blind trying to make himself an artist. In any event, he first became known to Broadway as an illustrator of covers for sheet music. At the time he pried Will Rogers out of a $175 week job in vaudeville, he was attached to the Ziegfeld staff as lyric and book writer for the annual Follies productions. As no job in the Follies is exactly fair to a man with imperfect vision, Mr. Buck set out to prove himself cured. He fared forth on cruises of discovery; he would show Mr. Ziegfeld the keenest eye for talent on Broadway. And he did.

* * *

Out of nooks and corners and byways Mr. Buck extracted vaudeville's odds and ends; talent unadorned and unsung. These unknowns were shipped to Ziegfeld, who did the rest; he made them all famous. No dissenting voice will be heard on the subject of Will Rogers; he was Mr. Buck's first and finest contribution, not only to the Follies but to the American theater goer as a complete recup. Mr. Buck might have retired gracefully on that one exploit and spent his declining days exhibiting distinguished service medals he should have received—but didn't. It cannot be lightly dismissed that, in discovering Will Rogers, a potential presidential candidate was brought into the political arena by Mr. Buck.

* * *

But there are other notable events on the Buck calendar of achievement. In equally obscure places he discovered Ed Wynn, who amused variety audiences with a multiplicity of hats; he found W. C. Fields a minor juggler and made him a famous one; he persuaded Eddie Cantor to give up small theaters and start away on a life of opulence under Mr. Ziegfeld. Then came John Steele, Joe Frisco and two Harlem youngsters, Keegan and Edwards. Mr. Edwards is now famous Ukelele Ike.

* * *

Picking up latent talent for himself has been just as simple for Gene Buck. Now a producer in his own name, he is tickling the ears of play fans in this old town with "Take the Air" at the Wilbur, the fastest moving and probably the funniest opus of the local Rialto. Up to his old tricks, Mr. Buck wrested Will Mahoney from somewhere. And Mr. Mahoney, by most dependable service, is certainly squaring the account. All of which cannot be very discouraging to a song writer who once wanted to be an illustrator.

MORE IMPOLITENESS!

THE DUKE OF RIGHTH becomes exceedingly pepsin with Lady Lesanger in this romantic fillum. The nuts and the miscreant are Vilma Banky and Noah Beery in "Two Lovers," next week at the Orpheum.

Miss Mischief

EDITH SHAYNE, character woman at the St. James, appears next week in "The Dove," drama of trickery near the Rio Grande.

"BEAUTY AND TALENT"

Women orchestras are not a new departure in the theater, for dating back to the days of the famous Boston Fadettes, they have been seen in vaudeville. But a girl band of musicians in the pit of a legitimate theater, playing an entire big musical show and accompanying the singers and dancers, is a decided novelty.

This novelty is one of the many found in the local presentation of "Just A Minute," at the Tremont. The orchestra in question is Count Berni Vici's Symphonic Girls," which is already well known in vaudeville.

On his former visits here in the two-a-day the Count's orchestra consisted of only 12 members. Now it has been augmented to 26. And where formerly it was merely a concert aggregation it now serves to the capacity of an orchestra of accompanists. And its members are pleasing to the eye as well as the ear—an unusual thing if you will recall some of these groups in the past.

When Count Berni Vici was engaged for "Just A Minute," it was stipulated that the girls must be good looking as well as talented. To this the Count readily agreed, little reckoning what a task he had undertaken. Six months ago he started to assemble his girls, and it was only recently he succeeded in obtaining a full quota of girls who were both attractive and capable musicians.

Kreisler Starts the New Season of Concerts

Fritz Kreisler will open a crowded and important month of recitals in Symphony Hall when he gives the first Sunday afternoon concert there on October 14. Geraldine Farrar will sing on the following Sunday afternoon, October 21, and the English Singers will return on Sunday afternoon, October 28.

Vladimir Horowitz, the phenomenal young Russian pianist, will give his second Boston recital on Sunday evening, October 21. Pompeo's Band, with Maria Mantovani, soprano, as soloist, will play on Sunday evening, October 28.

Edith Mason Sings First Plaza Series Concert

The first of the monthly series of operatic concerts scheduled for the Copley-Plaza Hotel will be given on Sunday evening, October 21. The artist will be Edith Mason, famed American prima donna and recognized as one of the leading sopranos of the operatic world.

These concerts will be under the personal supervision of Mme. Conti of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, of which organization Miss Mason is a member. It is the intention of Mme. Conti, acting in cooperation with Arthur Race, managing director of the Copley-Plaza, to present one distinguished operatic star at each of these concerts.

MODEL OF PROPRIETY?

MADGE KENNEDY, always the very pattern of probity wavers for one indecisive moment from the path of perfection in "Paris Bound," divorce divertisement now to be seen at the Plymouth Theater.

On the Border

"CHICKIE" WELLS is prepared to set forth a little yip-yip for the "Mischief Makers," burleycue at the Gayety next week.

SLAVE MART RE-LIVES

"Eighteen hundred—do I hear any more? Eighteen hundred—once; eighteen hundred—twice; eighteen hundred—for the third and last time—and SOLD to Simon Legree for eighteen hundred dollars!"

A triumphant grin on the face of the burly Legree, the passing over of some cash and a promissory note; the agonized appeal of Uncle Tom. One of the most powerful scenes ever filmed was immortalized in celluloid at Universal City where Harry Pollard directed and produced Harriet Beecher Stowe's everliving "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is now at the Modern and Beacon.

A startlingly faithful reproduction of the New Orleans auction rooms of Beard & Calhoun was portrayed. In one corner, a goatish auctioneer bedecked on the virtues of a handsome mulatto girl to a group of snickling young bloods; on another platform a second auctioneer disposed of a collection of furniture and hardware; at a third station, squealing and bellowing livestock were for sale; while in the fourth corner poor Uncle Tom was being transferred from a comfortable home to an uncertain and fatal future.

FIRST SYMPHONY

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its 48th season, next Friday afternoon in Symphony Hall. Serge Koussevitzky will then be heard in the following program: Beethoven's Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Hindemith's Concerto for Orchestra, Op. 38; and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, "Eroica."

Looking Ahead

OCTOBER 8—
"Americana," a new revue by J. P. McEvoy, at the Colonial.
"The Silent House," a mystery play, at the Majestic.
Tony Sarg's Marionettes at Tremont Temple.

OCTOBER 29—
"A Connecticut Yankee" at the Majestic.

ADVANCE IN FILM SETS REVIEWED

Motion picture settings have grown up from the time when they were nothing but poorly painted backgrounds. Now they are exteriors, exquisitely designed, often furnishing ideas for general use.

This is brought to mind by Cedric Gibbons, art director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who rather outdid himself in reproducing ultra-modern architecture and decorations for "Our Dancing Daughters," new sound film coming Monday to Loew's State. This picture tells a most up-to-date story in a way that was planned, at least, to be even a wee bit ahead of up-to-date.

"When they first began making pictures, no particular idea of settings was evolved," said Mr. Gibbons. "Everyone around the studios," he continued, "from the property boy up, had a hand in making ready the sets. Some theater scenic painters were given a picture torn from a book or magazine and went ahead with the work.

"Later, men with some technical equipment came into the film industry, and draftsmanship began to play its part in the designing of sets of a more believable quality. Good taste, however, was still outside the studio gates and a riot of ornamentation and fantastic architectural dreams resulted.

"This led to the desire for more simple and expressive settings and producers turned to the theater for competent designers. Wilfred Buckland, the first man of recognized ability to leave the theater for the films, is the pioneer in designing consistent motion picture sets."

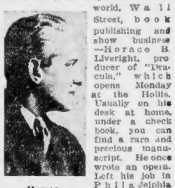
Jazz Orchestra Added to Gayety Theatre Shows

The day has passed when a theater orchestra acts merely as a supporting element to a burlesque show. Such is the reasoning of Max Michaels, manager of the Gayety. And as a result he has introduced Heluh's Gayety Jazz Orchestra to the patrons of the house. Today the orchestra is one of the features.

The orchestra accompanies the burlesque show throughout the whole production, and it also adds "bits" on the stage.

A PORTRAIT OF A BUSY PRODUCER

His wealth and fame depend upon the three greatest gambles in the world, Wall Street, book publishing and show business—Horace B. Liveright, producer of "Dracula," which opens Monday at the Hollis. Usually on his desk at home, under a check book, you can find a rare and precious manuscript. He once wrote an opera. Left his job in Philadelphia and came here to have it produced. It wasn't. He has fought with success such noble, democratic things as censorship and the clean books bill. Is a firm believer and user of publicity. When a new book is ready he announces it like a circus barker.



Horace Liveright

Always wears woolen socks. Even in the summer. In the winter he sits with his feet on the radiator.

His name is pronounced "Live-Right."

He is especially fond of colors. His wardrobe looks like a rainbow.

Generally orders eggs for luncheon and lamb chops for dinner. Something to drink and a piece of fruit and the meal is complete.

Often during editorial meetings while they are discussing such vital things as publishing Dreiser's "American Tragedy," in two volumes or one, he gets shaved.

He thoroughly enjoys a legal fight. He usually wins.

When something pleases him he refers to it as "A sweet bread and butter thing."

The shower in his office has a Palm Beach background.

He loathes bridge. Likes to play poker. Is very unhappy when he doesn't lose at the game. Has made many friends because of this.

SOLD DOWN RIVER

THE ORIGINAL "slave to duty" was Uncle Tom. No escapes for HIM. James B. Lowe and Marguerite Fischer do the "Tom" and "Eliza" roles in Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at Modern and Beacon.

Now Look Where He Is!

Thurston, amiable exponent of the black art at the Colonial, has had many interesting experiences. In Detroit last season he preached a sermon from the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal Church. Curiously enough, Mr. Thurston started out from college to be a minister of the gospel.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Order By Number Only

If you'd like to start a stampede backstage at the Tremont, where "Just a Minute" is playing, just shout "Helen." By actual count there are six Helens and three Helenes in the show. Four of these are in the orchestra and two—Helen Patterson and Helen Lockhart—are the show's principals.

NEW SYNCHRONOUS FILM PLAY NOW BREAKS SILENCE OF LOEW'S STATE SCREEN

WHAT EVERY SHOE SALESMAN KNOWS, these and other cosmic truths are made manifest to Johnny Mack Brown in "Our Dancing Daughters." In more aesthetic circles this spirited tableau might be called The Sole of the Dance. Anita Page is the girl. (State).

CLARA BOW, surely you know her, Mrs. Bow's girl from Brooklyn, who is now doing quite well in the movies, they say. She's working with "The Fleet's In," now at the Metropolitan.

WHERE MEN ARE MENACED. In "Just Married" at the Keith-Albee Ruth Taylor threatens William Austin with complete extinction unless he tells her where them pearls are, or something.

COLLEEN MOORE accomplishes miracles of cuteness for the doughty British soldiers (mostly officers) in "Lilac Time" at the Scollay Square. Haven't you seen it yet?

BY THE DAWN'S EARLY LIGHT Charlie Rogers is hauled out of bed to attend a little war in the clouds. This is "Wings," back again with sound, now booked at the Olympia and Fenway. Gunboat Smith is the other fellow.

SEASON OF SOUND REMAKES FILMS

By LEO GAFFNEY

JUST about a year ago this time, that renowned endman, Al Jolson, trolled a brace of mammy songs that were heard around the world. That was the real beginning of the sounding cinema. Prior to that, the Warner brethren, Jack and Harry, took a chance and rigged up some incidental music to go with John Barrymore's famous physiognomy. They christened the new baby, "Don Juan," and everyone who came to the party felt the vague tremors of history in the making. The critics—those learned doctors of the drama—tweaked a real or imaginary whisker and agreed that while the fresh infant was quite pretty, it would never grow up and make the football team. No muscle, no thews, they said. And for once the experts were right, that is, up to a certain point—the point where the erudite Dr. Jolson was called in on the case.

• • •

SOME say it was cod liver oil; others insist it was the famous Jolson's Jazzy Jube-Jubes that did the trick; while as many more stick up for cold baths, spinach and the daily dozen; but whatever the big medicine, the child certainly flourished and has since waxed very, very box-officey indeed. Blame it all on Massa Jolson, him that is now Big Chief Colin-In-The-Coffers, champion party-thrower of the amusement world.

• • •

IN one short year the sounding film is established. And now look at the darn thing! Every first class movie theater pants for it; wires itch for it; children cry for it. Production, production, production. Work, work, work, and with all the world to work on. Oh, but it is a large and luminous future!

• • •

LOCALLY, the madly progressive movies are more than holding their own. By Monday, barring a last-minute breakdown of some gear or sprocket, Loew's State will go the way of all films and break out with its first sounding picture, "Our Dancing Daughters," which is, moreover, Metro's first synchrony. This means that the Orpheum will shortly follow suit, thus nearly completing the list of major motion picture houses in Boston having this equipment. And very soon it will be 100 per cent all around.

• • •

ANOTHER big change in the complexion of affairs during the last eventful year is the startling decline of the "star system," so called. Formerly, producers were greatly concerned with players, big names. Stars, they contended, had the real following, names sold the picture. The story was secondary. But when the producers did happen on a really fine story, what did they do but deliberately dumb it up for "the 12-year-old mind," as they called it, of the composite film audience.

• • •

SMALL wonder the public got fed up. People are steadily becoming show-wise and will not always be fooled by plaster of paris heroes, male beauties and their sisters. Let no one forget it, the story and the director must come first if there is to be an entertainment. Nevertheless, the practice of stultifying scenarios has by no means entirely subsided, but it HAS been falling off like the worthless stock that it is. Without doubt it will ultimately disappear and be taken off the market for good and all.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS!

"One day last winter," said Howard Thurston, the magician now at the Colonial, "I sent one of my assistants with a pigeon — catching-net to have it repaired—the same net that I used to catch live pigeons among the audience. As the weather was below zero — we were out in Winnipeg — the chaps must have been a funny sight, carrying a butterfly net with a six-foot handle through the streets. He had not gone a block before a policeman stopped him.

Thurston

"'What's the big idea?' asked the officer. My assistant was in a playful mood. He held his fingers to his lips, looked cautiously about him and replied: 'Sh-h-h! don't tell any one. I'm going to catch butterflies.'

"'Come with me,' said the policeman gently, 'and I'll show you a wonderful place to catch them. Pink ones, gold ones, spotted ones, big ones—'

"My assistant decided to explain matters.

"'I was only joking,' he laughed. 'This net belongs to a magician. He catches pigeons in it.'

"The policeman grabbed his arm. "'Come along with me,' he said. 'Now I know you're crazy.'"

VAUDEVILLE

• • •

A Paramount picture. On the stage, Frank Cambria's "Beaux Art Frolic" with Rodemich bandshow.

• • •

LOEW'S STATE—"Our Dancing Daughters" (first run) with sound, an original screen story by Josephine Lovett. The Younger Generation a-nightclubbing and what comes of it all. The cast includes Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen, Jobyna Ralston, Clara Bow, Richard Tucker, El Brendel and Henry B. Walthall. William Wellman directed. A Paramount picture. Also Vitaphone features.

• • •

• • •

• • •

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in "Two Lovers," adapted from Baroness Orczy's novel, "Leatherface," Historical romance in the time of Flanders and William of Orange. Cast includes Noah Beery and Nigel de Bruller. Fred Niblo directed. A United Artists' picture. Also vaudeville.

NEW KEITH'S MARCHES ON

The opening of the new $8,000,000 B. F. Keith Memorial Theater, which is located almost on the site of the birthplace of vaudeville, shows the forward march of a great American institution.

It was only 40 years ago that Benjamin Franklin Keith was conducting a small museum and "show" in a three-story frame building next door to the old Adams House.

The building had a cellar which was used as a storage place for abandoned baggage and freight by the hostelry. Half of the first floor front was given over to a confectionery and baker's counter.

The other half of the entrance space was used as the main entrance to Keith's "Museo." In this skimpy little vestibule were some plaster casts, stuffed animals and wax figures.

It is interesting to contrast the magnificent new B. F. Keith Memorial Theater and that original "Museo," whence sprung the whole institution of American vaudeville.

The original "Museo" and 199 kitchen chairs in its auditorium. The stage was constructed of borrowed packing-cases floored with rough boards. The footlights were gas-jets in a 20-foot pipe, the stopcock of which could be turned from the box-office—a great "modern improvement" for those days.

"DRY MARTINI" READY

Harry D'Arrast, the French director, has just completed "Dry Martini," a sophisticated story of Paris, for Fox Films. Mary Astor and Matt Moore have the featured roles. The story is based on the novel of the same title by John Thomas. D'Arrast came into prominence after assisting Charlie Chaplin in producing "A Woman of Paris" a few years ago.

JOE DONAHUE STEPS UP

Joseph Donahue, brother of Jack, Charlestown's most noted product of the stage, returns to Boston on October 5, to the Colonial, in J. P. McEvoy's new revue "Americana." This will be Joe Donahue's first appearance in his home town in a production in six years, his last engagement being with "Lady Butterfly," although he has played Keith's in the interim.

Joe Donahue

Joe enjoys his brother's skill as a dancer, and dances the lightest as only a Donahue can. He replaced Jack in "Angel Face," and has been understudy in "Sunny" and other notable productions. Joe also played in Arthur Hammerstein's "Always You."

There are four members of the Donahue family on the stage. In addition to Jack and Joseph there are Walter and Alice, who are in vaudeville.

Netoco Chain Acquires Four More New Houses

Samuel Pinanski, president of Netoco, announces that this the circuit and Abraham Goodside of Portland, Me., executed an agreement on September 19, 1928 under the terms of which the New England Theaters Operating Corporation is to acquire a controlling interest in the Empire, Strand and Jefferson Theaters, Portland, Me., and in the Capitol Theater, Springfield, Mass.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Forensically Speaking

Now that "The Bellamy Trial" has dug itself in at the Copley, Mr. E. E. Clive is back on the rostrum. If you do not find him acting, rehearsing or reading new plays, it's a hundred to one shot that he will be found on some public platform, orating of The Stage. Today, Tomorrow and Any Day

No Foolin', No, Not Much!

The girl who was so dumb she thought "The Racket" was a sound picture will hardly understand this one: Christie Comedies have made something called "The Dizzy Diver." In it there is a line to the effect that, "the Navy has a fish quartette—first tuna, second tuna, barracuda and bass." Can you beat it?

JOLLY TARS WITH CLARA IN FILM

With "The Fleet's In," new film at the Metropolitan, the professionally impish Clara Bow has a semi-comic affair that is certainly a "wow" for about four-fifths of its way.

During the major portion of its reels it is more comic than serio, more lifelike than show-like. These are the sequences when Clara and a bunch of boys from the "battle wagons" get real well acquainted.

James Hall is supposed to be the "hero," and you meet him on the San Francisco waterfront as he comes rollicking ashore with pals on pleasure bent. A dance hall and its girls are the principal attractions.

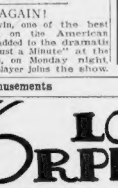
There are various fights and several more perfectly natural things for a sailor. This is the life-like part. The rest, showing a repentant hero and a Clara gone melodramatic, is the show-like part. In the earlier episodes all hands act like normal human beings. After that it simmers down to just a movie.

With Malcolm St. Clair to direct her, Miss Bow is all you expect of that famous redhead. James Hall is less fortunate, for among the male members of the cast there is one Jack Cakie, a grinning and freckled boy who looks like the most promising star material that has cropped up this year.

On the stage at the "Met" there is Frank Cambria's "Beaux Arts Frolic," something quite nice in revues, with Mr. Hedenick and his boys all present and accounted for.

Little Theater Players Offer One-Act Drama

Raymond Gilbert, who will appear with Mavis Fenn at the Keith-Albee next week in the Little Theater presentation of "The Light," has spent his lifetime on the stage. At the age of 13 Gilbert was carrying a spear as a "super" in the theaters of Omaha. When he was 16 he went on the road with a traveling company and in due time reached Broadway. Some of his roles in New York productions were "Black Dog" in "Treasure Island"; "John the Baptist" in "The Holy City;" and "Uncle Noah" in "Cape Cod Folks." He has also played through the South in vaudeville and at one time was companion player to Douglas Fairbanks in the Frederick Ward Company.



Mavis Fenn

HE'S IN AGAIN!

George Spelvin, one of the best known names on the American stage, will be added to the dramatic personae of "Just a Minute" at the Tremont when, on Monday night, this versatile player joins the show.

FOUR IN FUN WITH "HOLD EVERYTHING"

THE SAD ACCOUNT OF THE SCHNITZELPRITZER is contained within the plot of "Hold Everything" at the Majestic. Victor Moore tells of the perils of home-made beer, and of the horrifying discovery that he got to like it himself!

Surgical Disfigurement Seen in New Film Play

In these days of plastic surgery, chin-lifting and permanent waves, it is hard to believe that less than 300 years ago similar arts were used to disfigure people rather than to beautify them. Yet, in "The Man Who Laughs," which comes to the Modern and Beacon beginning next Saturday, this hideous handiwork forms the basis of one of the world's most gripping love stories.

Marion Davies Meets Star in Film's Stage Version

By ROBERT J. PREW.
(Universal Service Special Cable.)

London, Sept. 29—London is today recounting a rare theatrical treat enjoyed when Marion Davies, who played the principal part in the film, "The Cardboard Lover," was Tallulah Bankhead, former Broadway star, who now is filling the same role in the stage version of the play here, met.

The occasion was the private showing yesterday of Miss Davies' film at the Tivoli Theater, which was filled with distinguished guests. Miss Bankhead was frankly delighted with the screen representation, and warmly congratulated Miss Davies, saying:

Koussevitzky Will Play Bass in Joint Recital

Serge Koussevitzky and Henri Casadesus, foremost living masters of the double-bass and viola d'amore, will play concerted music for these old instruments of the 18th century at their recital in Symphony Hall, on Monday evening, October 15. Koussevitzky will then play his own "Double bass Concerto" and his own "Valse Miniature," together with other short solo numbers.

Young American Pianiste Will Give Concert

Ruth Redefer, gifted young pianist who appears in recital in Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening, Oct. 17th, was born in Nashville, Tenn. Her father was Professor of Greek at Vanderbilt University, and her mother an accomplished musician and pupil of the late Emil Liesling.

At the age of five she began her musical studies under her mother and continued working with her until her early teens. Upon graduation from high school, Ruth Redefer was too young to enter college. Instead she devoted the next few years to her music, with the well-known Von Mickwitz as her teacher.

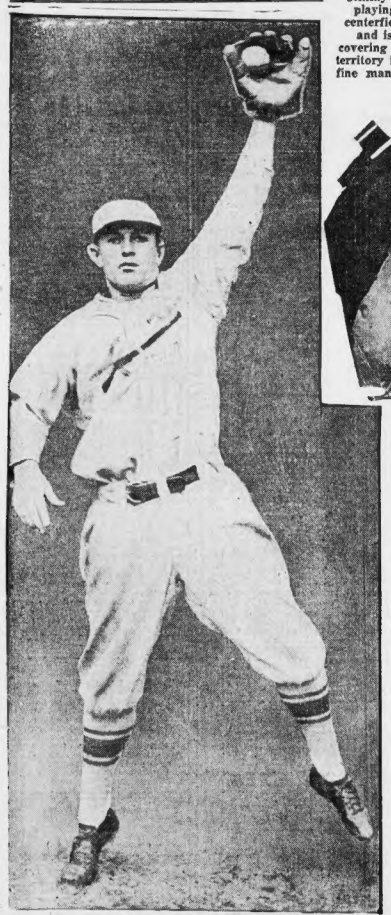
FLY HAWK. Jimmy Welsh, former Braves outfielder, is doing his share in keeping the Giants in the fight for the National League championship. Jimmy is playing centerfield and is covering his territory in a fine manner.



FORMER BRAVE IN N. L. PENNANT FIGHT. Andy High, former Braves infielder, is now with the Cardinals and his batting has been partly responsible for the St. Louis club being the league leader. Andy is not a great fielder, but for a small fellow he certainly can get his base hits. When Andy is not at third base he usually gets in the game as pinch hitter. The Cards have never regretted securing the services of Andy.

PREPARED FOR ARMY DRIVE. Glenn O'Brien, Boston University's quarterback, will start the game calling signals for his third successive year. Glenn is light and rather brittle. Because of this handicap he does very little ball carrying.

—Staff Photo.

WORLD'S CHAMPION PISTOL SHOT. Lieut. Harry Marsh, of Fort Schuyler, established a world's record for pistol shooting when he made a score of 99 2-3 per cent. Marsh was rewarded with medals and trophies for his excellent pistol shooting during the summer.

—International Newsreel Photo.

ARMY GRID STAR. Murrel, one of the greatest college fullbacks in the country, is expected to be the star in the opening game of the season today when the Military Academy battles Boston University at West Point. Murrel does the kicking and is a hard line-smashing fullback.

SUN SETTING FOR STEVE. Steve Donoghue, once the greatest jockey in England, is now bankrupt. Steve has been up on six Derby winners and he was astride Papyrus in the famous international race against Zev. Donoghue once received $50,000 for a single victory; now he rides for $15 with a $10 bonus if he wins. Steve introduced the American style of riding in England.

CANADIAN POLOIST. Mrs. Jane Tulle, above, is a member of the Alberta (Canada) girl polo team that is battling the Westchester County woman team for international honors at Rye, N. Y. The American team won the first game of the series.

"SPECIAL DELIVERY" STARTS TODAY. Al Marsters, Dartmouth star halfback, will be back at his old position today when the Green opens with Norwich at Hanover, N. H. Marsters, although only a sophomore last year, was the sensation of the country. His long runs and his total yardage for the season were amazing. Marsters is the only star ball carrier in the Dartmouth backfield this year and he should be given plenty of opportunity to better his record for yardage made last year. Al hails from Arlington and he learned the grid game at Arlington high school.

Cardinals Can Cinch Pennant at Wigwam Today

WIN MEANS FLAG FOR INVADERS

Leaders Two Games in Front of Giants; Delaney to Toss Last Brave Tilt

Grows. And today, the fading contenders conclude the disastrous Club series.

So the worst the Cards can get is a tie. If they lose to the Braves today while the Giants win, and are smacked again tomorrow, the race will be tied. Then the fighting pair will have a three-game rocking horse series.

The odds at the moment are 10 to 1 that the Cards will win. They have class and courage, and that important two-game edge. They prayed their gameness by taking the best Boston ball game of the year, after 15 desperate innings.

They had the luck, but c ampions always do. Looks like the Boston season would end this p. m., with a pennant being won at the same time.

THE Braves gave everything they had to beat back the Cards Friday. Bobby Smith pitched a grand game, and everybody was hustling. But second division ball players are nothing else but, even in their inspired moments. The Braves passed up a dozen chances to win that game, and keep the race in.

They tried, though, and furnished the faithful with a brilliant, hairraising three hours of fine baseball. Two mistakes gave the Cards their pennant. Jack Smith foolishly tried to score from second in the twelfth, after Meuller had slapped a short single to left. Hafey has an arm that Buffy Lewis might envied. So Jack was thrown out by five yards. And three was only one out, and two other Braves around the bases.

Then in the fifteenth, one gone, Lance Richbourg dropped a fair Jasper fly. Lance had been playing brilliant ball through the long day, and was all set for the catch. It was just one of those unaccountable errors. But it opened the floods, and before the Braves locked them, seven hostile runs had scored.

That proved the Cards champs, that and their drive to overcome the early three run deficit against the great Smith pitching. But there is there when it has to be, which is the answer to its lead.

MANAGER BILL McKECHNIE expected to use Wes Willis Sunday afternoon. Willis has been suffering from a cold, but he is almost okay again. He worked out yesterday. He was being reserved for the New York Sunday game, but now that doesn't mean so much.

Winning today is the pennant, so Willie will take his shot against a somewhat inferior opponent. He should be. And Delaney will try to end the Brave season properly. Art has done his share as a newcomer and may bother the foe, But licking them is something else again.

If the game is half as good or nearly as exciting as the Friday million dollar battle, the fans will remember this season for a long, long time.

Scozza Signs to Battle Flynn

After waiting 18 hours for a decision from Bert Finch, manager of Lou Scozza, Eddie Mack, matchmaker for the Argonne, finally clinched the Arthur Flynn-Lou Scozza 10-round go over 26 holes opened today. E. M. Elnslow of Lynn, Mass., scored a 79 on his first round, while Dougie Grant broke the course record for amateurs with a 68.

FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE RETURNS TO FRANCE

HIGHLIGHTS IN CANZONERI-ROUTIS BOUT

Andre Routis of France defeated Tony Canzoneri, recognized world's featherweight champion, in one of the most spectacular title bouts ever seen. Photo on left shows Referee Eddie Forbes breaking the pair in the fifth round, while the other photo shows Routis on the floor in the first round. Canzoneri won all the early rounds, but Routis earned the award by a great rally in the closing stanzas. Thus the feather title held a few years ago by Eugene Crique, French war hero, returns to Sunny France.

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—Faced with the sternest test American polo has received in years, the United States international four, led by dashing Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., meets Argentina in the first game of the series for the championship of the Americas at the Meadowbrook Club field at Westbury, L. I., today.

The second game is scheduled for next Wednesday and the third, if necessary, a week today. The Argentines, strong on teamwork and superbly mounted, ruled strong favorites.

The United States four is rated at 35 goals, three more than their South American rivals, and this rating may be upheld unofficial Richbrook and tenuminutes, parties by Grant broke the course record for amateurs with a 68.

The Argentines have been too impressive in their workouts to be anything but outstanding favorites.

The lineups and individual handicaps follow:

Lynn Golfer Scores 79 in Wales Cup Play

Sandwich, Eng., Sept. 29 (AP)—Competition for the Prince of Wales cup over 36 holes opened today. E. M. Elnslow of Lynn, Mass., scored a 79 on his first round, while Dougcent of the scores gave less the state tax of 5 per cent, that the match could be made.

The match will be staged at Mechanic Institute, Tuesday, October 2. Both boys have agreed to box for 158 at 165 pounds. They have also agreed to box on a winner and loser end—50 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser.

Lou Scozza was born in Italy in 1905, and is the latest of the new crop of middleweights. Only last November at Buffalo, Scozza upset Tuffy John Risko 25 pounds, gave the Cleveland batter boy one of the hardest fights of his career. But the fight went the distance and Risko was lucky to get the decision.

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

THE THREE MUSKETEERS of the boxing racket rolled in to see Mr. Boston.

"Jack Britton is the fighter, Pat Collins the eater, while I'm the talker of the outfit," opened Dan Morgan. "We're all glad to meet you. Now shake boys."

Britton, 43 years young, removed his hat and showed his jet black hair. His Irish eyes sparkled, while his face beamed health.

"You can tell the world I'm all ready for this Indian, Pete Pacheco, whom I battle at the Arena on Monday night," said Britton. "I was always handy scalping Indians.

"It was in Boston that I got my start as a fighter. I think you were at the ringside the night I knocked out Eddie Murphy of South Boston. Then I battled Ted (Kid) Lewis, Eddie Shevlin, Tommy Robson, Joe Eagan, Mike O'Dowd and a flock of other well-known men here."

Louis Fenny, Lynn promoter, dropped in at this point.

"Did you like the way Jack polished off Mickey Sears at your club the other night?" asked Morgan.

"He sure looked the part of a real fighting machine," replied Louis. "Before I made the match I thought Britton was an old man. A member of my organization, who saw Jack in New York, told me he looked good. So I booked him with Sears. What class and energy he showed in winning."

"MR. BOSTON asked Morgan if he was seriously considering a meeting between Britton and Al Mello.

"Just now no," but later on maybe YES. Monday night Jack fights Pacheco at the Arena. I think he will win. A week from Tuesday Britton will tackle some worthy opponent at an Argonne Club show. We also have another date at Lynn.

"After Britton cleans up all of the local welterweights outside of Mello the public will demand a match between Jack and the New England champion. Of course if Britton cannot get past fellows like Pacheco I don't want the Mello bout."

"Don't you think Mello would knock Britton out?" queried Mr. Boston.

"Nobody is doing that," asserted Morgan with much feeling. "Jack has had 326 bouts during his pro career and has never been stopped. He was kaoyed once when battling as an amateur.

"I HAVE an idea Britton can lick Mello. I arrived at this opinion when I saw Ace Hudkins defeat Al in New York. Hudkins, a rough and ready fellow, is one boxer whom Britton always figured he could beat. Ace would tire himself trying to score a clean punch against the former champion.

"Mello had Hudkins on the floor at one time, but Ace's aggressiveness carried him on to victory. I figure Britton is too so d a boxer for Mello.

"I tried to match Jack with Sammy Baker, but the latter wouldn't have any part of my 43-year-old youngster."

MORGAN then started to talk about Con O'Kelley, Tom O'Rourke's new Irish heavyweight.

"He's a great fighter, isn't he, Jack?" piped Dan.

"Quit your kidding, Dan," shot back Britton. "I don't think you ever saw him box. You're boosting him because O'Rourke is your friend."

And everybody, even Morgan, laughed merrily.

BEFORE the party left Johnny Buckley dropped in to say the real fight of the show Monday night will be when Joe Monte battles Tiger Payne.

"Monte and Payne are terrific sockers," said Johnny. "The mob in New York is a" talking about their two sensational battles in the big town. If Monte ns, I intend to demand a shot at Jim Maloney for the Brockton heavyweight."

Buckley's flow of oratory in regard to Monte silenced even Morgan.

"I AM working under a slight speaking handicap," sighed Dan. "I have lost had most of my teeth extracted. Then since I come to Boston fellows like Dave Nelligan, Charley Kralis and Tom Green have been making me put on the feed bag so often that I have slowed down."

TUNNEY GUEST OF AMBASSADOR FLETCHER

Rome, Sept. 29 (AP)—Gene Tunney, ex-champion, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given today by Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Italy.

During the morning Tunney spent several hours in pursuit of the necessary pre-matrimonial documents for his coming marriage to Miss Mary Josephine Lauder of Greenwich, Ct., which may be held in Rome.

Today's luncheon was in Ambassador Fletcher's apartment in the historic Prosniglioni palace built in 1503 by Cardinal Scipio Leoghese, nephew of Pope Paul V. It stands near the Royal palace of the Quirinal, which was once the papal residence.

The guests included members of the American newspaper corps in Rome, embassy attaches and Mrs. Fletcher, who was the only woman present. All congratulated Tunney on his coming wedding.

The retired champion showed deep interest in the palace's art treasures, notably in Guido Reni's "Aurora," a ceiling painting in an adjoining building and in a "Samson" attributed to Caracci.

Richards in Pro Tennis Finals

New York, Sept. 29 (INS)—Vincent Richards, former Davis Cup player and present American professional tennis champion, faces a hard task this afternoon when he meets Karel Kozelub, European professional champion, in the final round match of the national professional tournament at Forest Hills. The wiry little Czecho-Slovakian, regarded as the greatest player in the world, has beaten Richards in each of their three previous clashes.

In the semi-finals Kozelub defeated Harvey B. Snodgrass of the Coronado Beach club, California, in straight sets while Richards was forced to five sets before eliminating Howard Kinsey of San Francisco.

Girls Start Off

Gardner, Sept. 29—The high school girls field hockey team, undefeated for two seasons, opened its 1928 season by blanking Shrewsbury High, 3 to 0, at the new school athletic field. Mildred Steeves was the individual star of the game.

Many Runs Will Be Scored in Series

By ROGERS HORNSBY

THIS coming World Series should be notable for the number of runs scored. I make this prediction for two reasons. This has been a high scoring year in both big leagues.

There have been the usual number of low score games, but there have been a great flock of wild batting orgies. It is natural to suppose that the contending teams will carry the habit into the series.

Then too, the pitchers of both championship clubs have been through a tough old test. The veterans—and they will do the series work—have been going along for the matter of six weeks at very high pressure. They are all pretty tired now.

The few days rest before the collision starts next week, will help them some, but it will not bring them back with snap that was there in midsummer.

THAT'S the way it looks now. It is impossible, of course, to make any accurate predictions about any game or series. The tired pitchers may come through like a lot of world beaters. Or the batters may be so nervous that the war clubs will be dead. But I think as I mentioned that there will be a lot of slugging.

It looks like a long series to me, too. Neither club has a decided edge on the other. There should be no easy walkover, such as the Yankees had last year. And I think the National much the stronger league.

There were two good clubs in the American; the rest nowhere. There are six real ball teams in the National, and it is natural to suppose that the club that emerged champion from a six real fight, will be pretty seasoned and tougher than the team that had but one opponent to knock off?

The American League has a slight edge, because the opening games are played there this year. But this really does not amount to much against a game outfit. And the birds in there looking for the crown the Pirates lost are game as they come. They had to be to come through.

THE matter of nervous and physical comebacks will play a big part in this assignment, too. Clubs that come down to the wire fighting tooth and nail always crop a flock of crippled and worn out athletes. The stars have to stick in there at the finish, even though they are not at the top of capital.

They have three or four days to snap back, but that isn't long for building back muscles that have been taking a pounding for three or four months. Physical strength and staying power will come does to deciding this particular issue. Whichever flock of pitchers can pull up some new reserves of energy will bring the title and the b' money to its league.

As I have remarked previously, the National League winners came staggering down to the wire in a last desperate victory drive. They won because they had to. The American Leaguers lost a lot of games in the final month, but didn't go under because their lone rivals were losing, too.

Other things being even, a team with the winning habit has the advantage. The Cards and Giants are getting bumped in the tough spots. It's a mental condition mostly, but important. Also, the team that wins the World's Series is almost as important as the pitching.

The American League entry has the spirit and the win habit. That's why I can't see any opening for the American Leaguers to cop again.

For the first of a series of weekly shows in the glorified home of action, Col. Bob McKirdy has arranged one of the best cards in recent years. A three 10-rounders, Joe Monte of Brockton will be paired with Tiger Payne, heavyweight champion of Australia; Jack Britton, former welterweight champion of the world, with Pete Pacheco of Lynn, and Larry Brignolia, Camden star, with Young Granberg of Worcester.

In an eight-rounder, Eddie Holmes, Dorchester fire-brand, will meet Jerry Jance of Lawrence for the third time.

A four-rounder between Benny Zabel, promising heavyweight star, and Joe Cabana of Falmouth will rank the best fighting card presented here in many months.

Charlie Parker, popular South End lightweight, and Frankie Mc-Cormick of Scotland have been named in the eight-round semi-final bout, while in the 4x-rounders, Johnny Hanlon of Lynn High School will be paired with Jimmy Wilde of Wakefield and Leo Zieno of Revere with Eddie Hedges of Lynn.

ST. AMBROSE STARTS SUNDAY ON GRID SCHEDULE

The St. Ambrose football team of Dorchester will open its season Sunday at the town field against the strong Brookline Town Team.

Coach Joe Harrell, of St. John's College, Brooklyn, has been working hard the past two weeks and has developed a first class aggregation.

McKENNEY GETS WATCH TODAY FROM STUDENTS

Joe McKenney, youngest college coach in the country, will be given a wrist watch and floral piece by the B. C. students before the Catholic University game at Fenway Park, today.

CRUSADERS IN FIRST GAME TODAY

Holy Cross football team will swing into action today with the United States Torpedo Base team of Newport.

The game is not on the regular schedule, but for the last few years the Purple has played host to the middies at Fitton Field.

The visitors are stronger this year than they have been in recent years, as was evidenced by their clean-cut victory over Colby last Saturday.

Crusaders have been practicing the timing of plays all week, and three teams ran through signals at the same time, with a rhythm that was nearly perfection.

O'Donnell has three sets of backs on the training table at present, and Saturdays game will give him a chance to size up the individuals, so that he will be able to present his strongest team against St. John's on the following Saturday.

Johnny Murphy of Auburn, who appeared to have the first call for the quarterback post, had to give way to Blondy Ryan of Lynn, when he injured his right shoulder in practice.

Murphy will hardly be called upon until the St. John's game, and in the meantime Joe Dougherty and Barney Flinn, both of whom saw service last year, will have an opportunity to serve as understudies to Ryan.

Johnny Evers, a junior, who heretofore had confined his athletic prowess to the diamond, has clinched the starting fullback honors over Red Baker, last year's freshman ace.

YANKEES AGAIN WIN FLAG

Another bitter late season struggle in the American league has passed into history, while the New York Yankees emerge champions once again, the sixth time in eight years, and the third in a row.

By defeating the Detroit Tigers 11 to 6 Miller Huggins' clan clinched the bunting and incidentally won the interest of the paying.

It is a mathematical impossibility for the Athletics to win now. Even if they sweep the rest of their scheduled games and the A's win their two, New York would still finish a half a game ahead.

The victory of the Hugmen writes a dramatic chapter in the season's history, especially for the athletics, who, after forging from far behind a few weeks ago, crept to within striking distance of the top, then struck, and lasted on the top only one day before the Yankees came back.

FITTONS START TOMORROW

For an opening game the Fitton A. C. of East Boston has selected one of the classiest semi-pro football teams in New England. The Needle Island eleven clashes with the St. Augustines of South Boston at Ft. Banks tomorrow.

The Fittons have several new college stars on the team and are being coached by Ed Hawley, former mentor at Peabody high school. Ed realizes the battle he has on his hands, as the South Boston team held the Fittons to a scoreless tie last year.

"Jiggs" Donohue, St. John's prep grid coach, and one of the smartest schoolboy coaches in this section, is taking charge of the St. Augustines. It looks like a very even game.

ST. THOMAS H. N. ELEVEN OPENS

The Holy Name football team of St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain, will open its season tomorrow afternoon, tackling the Pontiac A. C. of Roslindale on Doherty field, John W. Murphy playgrounds, Carolina ave., Jamaica Plain.

Fred Hardy, director of the Holy Name team, is anxious to secure other games. Joe Fitzgerald, former Dean academy star, is coaching the Jamaica Plain outfit.

Exactly 318 college football teams swing into action today in the United States to open what promises to be one of the greatest grid seasons on record.

The 1928 model Boston College gridiron rolls into Fenway Park for the initial exhibition of the fall.

A squad of stalwart warriors, primed for hard season, will trot on the field to start the new era of B. C. football in the right way by beating Catholic University, a small but powerful team from Washington, D. C.

Catholic University, a production of Jack McAuliffe, former Dartmouth College coach and a resident of Leominster, is the Eagle opponent. But local interest is centered on the class of football which Joe McKenney's team will exhibit.

McKenney has brought a brand new system to the Heights. The old smashing type of game has been relegated to the museum and Coach Joe McKenney has mixed plays from Warner, Hoskins and some new stuff to be learned from the Major of Fordham.

B. C. IS IN SHAPE

His squad is highly conditioned. The McKenney plays have been learned thoroughly. And Boston College is out to show some 10,000 fans a real type of football team.

Boston College is the favorite to win today. There's no reason in the world for giving the Eagles the pre-game advantage other than that they have always been able to beat Catholic University when it still held among the weaker colleges.

Last fall Boston College was rated to win over Duke in the first game. But the Eagles took one of the worst first game beatings in history. Something similar may happen today. Little is known of the C. U. outfit but McAuliffe has had some good material to work with and is a first class coach.

Captain Schmidt of the Cardinal gridmen is the only member of the team who has made himself known to Gridiron fans heretofore. And because the B. C. ends some trouble with his running.

TEAM WELL BALANCED

Boston College goes into the game with four green men in the lineup. But there are enough veterans mixed in to erase any fears that McKenney might have of the team going to pieces when the going gets rough.

Don Sheehan will be called upon to keep the middle of the line from going up in the air. Sheehan has been playing three years beside him is Andrew Anderson, a sophomore first while Al Morelli, another soph, will team with Sheehan at the guards.

Boston College has the finest pair of tackles in history to start the season. There never were any better than Captain Warren McGuirk and Pete Herman at the Heights.

Dixon and Murphy are the B. C. ends. Both boys are wonderful receivers of forward passes. Dixon, a six-foot three Norwood boy, grabs the passes out of the air with one hand. Murphy's chief forte is blocking punts.

MURPHY BLOCKS PUNTS

Murphy broke into the varsity last fall after a few games had passed, and blocked six punts before the season closed. He has a certain weave that is very mysterious to the backs defending the kicker and he usually gets within touching distance of the punt.

The backfield is veteran with one exception. Johnny Marr is there is he, and has been playing high school and freshman football for he past five years.

Weston will call the signals with Tom Smith and Paddy Creedon in the other positions. Weston is expected to give an exhibition of his old time running today.

Joe McKenney is blessed with a wealth of reserve material. He has good guards in Yaus Wilczeski, Bud Gorman and Ed Donahue. John Convery and Fernie Killoy will be ready to step in at center. DiVaput Hefferly, Whelan and Buckley are the reserve ends.

BATTLE FOR GOLF TITLE

GLENNA COLLETT VIRGINIA VAN WIE

Sensational golf enabled Miss Glenna Collett of Providence to run up a lead of 7 on Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago in the first nine holes of a 36-hole match for the national women's golf title at Hot Springs today. This amazing lead places the Western youngster in a difficult position and gives Miss Collett a big advantage in her third quest for the women's title. —International Newsreel Photo

Dartmouth Plays Norwich Today

By BILL GRIMES

Hanover, N. H., Sept 29—Seated in the press stand watching Dartmouth open its 1928 season with Norwich University this afternoon at Memorial Field, will be Arnie Horween and Mal Stevens, head coaches at Harvard and Yale.

Horween and Stevens are here as guests of Head Coach Jess Hawley and will watch the Green with the keenest interest. Although this is Arnie Horween's first visit to Dartmouth as a scout, the Crimson sleuths have been steady customers at every game since Dartmouth and Harvard resumed football relations.

Mal Stevens is the first Eli to scout the Green in two years, as there was a mix-up in the agreement between Dartmouth and Yale.

With the exception of Freddie Breithut, Dartmouth will start its first team against Coach Dewey Graham's cadets from Norwich University.

Breithut is just recovering from a groin injury, and it was thought advisable to keep him out of action until next week. Skip Wolf, who was a substitute back on the freshman team last fall, will replace Breithut, and it will be a great surprise to those who have seen the former Brooklyn Poly toy do his stuff this season, if he does not perform in a most creditable manner.

Playing his first varsity game, Wolf will be nervous at the start, but once he shakes off that sophomore jinx he will show a breed of ball carrying second only to Al Masters.

The announcement that Captain Dick Black, the Pekin plowboy, would start at fullback was one of the greatest pieces of news Dartmouth sympathizers have received this season. Black will only play for a few minutes and if he is able to come through without injuring his knee, Dartmouth's chances of success for this year will be greatly improved.

Amateurs Clash at St. Joe's Tonight

With the largest entry list of the season, St. Joseph's T. A. S. will hold forth tonight in Commercial Hall, Boston sq., with its weekly amateur tournaments.

It is expected that at least 30 bouts, and probably 35 or more, will be held in seven classes. The 175-pound class, for the first time this year, is featured, and some promising light-heavyweights are expected to make their appearances.

In addition to the 175-pound division, the 112, 118, 126 and 161-pound classes will be open to all, while the 135 and 147-pounds classes will be for novices. There will be action at the "home of action" tonight.

MILTON TOWN TEAM TO OPEN SEASON TOMORROW

The Milton Town Team, champions of the South Shore, will open their football season tomorrow at Scituate when they will play the strong Scituate Town Team. Coach George Burke has rounded together the best team ever to represent the "richest town" in the world. Many of the veteran players are back on the job and Scituate football enthusiasts will witness one of the best games of the season.

WOODBOURNE A. A. OPENS SEASON TOMORROW

The Woodbourne A. A. will open their season tomorrow afternoon at the Wachusetts st., playgrounds, Forest Hills. They will clash with the strong Dorchester Catholic Club eleven. The Woodbournes have a few open games and would like to hear from some of our strong amateur clubs for games. They can be arranged by telephoning Manager Hogan at Jamaica 1846-M.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

FLOCK OF GOOD SCHOOL GAMES ON TODAY

By DICK McSWEENEY

With 30 contests scheduled for this afternoon, there will be no dearth of games for school-boy football fans. Eight of these 30 struggles may be classed as major affairs and draw large crowds.

Medford-Brockton affair is a pretty even match. Injuries have taken their toll of both teams. Lister, Brockton quarterback is out with a broken collarbone, and Mulkern, Medford, end, will look on because of injuries he received in scrimmage.

Somerville will take on Salem at Salem. The Witch City team will win this one, but not without playing heads up football.

RINDGE AFTER LAWRENCE

The Rindge eleven will journey to Lawrence intent on winning and it looks as if the Lawrence team will suffer a defeat. Mullaney and Gill, gun are the two backs who must be stopped if Lawrence would win.

An interesting battle is on between Providence Tech of Rhode Island and Natick high school at the latter's grounds. A hard game, but Malden ought to win.

Another interesting game will be played at Everett when Stevens high of New Hampshire meets Everett at Everett. The site which Everett suffered last Saturday at the hands of St. Peter's will make the Everett eleven a dangerous opponent for the New Hampshire club. Everett by at least two touchdowns.

Amesbury will help to prove Haverhill's strength when these two teams meet at Haverhill. The score should be in favor of Haverhill.

ST. PETER'S BATTLES

St. Peter's of Worcester, the team which held Everett to a 0-0 tie last week, will play at Nashua, Judging these two teams from the showings they made in their opening games, St. Peter's will be victorious.

Arlington, with a green eleven, will visit Framingham. It wouldn't be a bit surprising if the game resulted in a tie.

The other games will furnish thrills and amusement on a lesser scale than the above. They will draw the attendance and who knows they may be better played than the major clashes.

B. C. high out-played and out-fought Cambridge Latin, winning 6—0. Lillis and Cronin, as well as Fitz, played a wonderful game for the Maroon and Gold and they did just as good a job on the defensive as on the offense.

Leander McDonald took the defeat of his team philosophically. He is more intent on winning the Suburban League games than any other contests and he figures that his team, although defeated in its first two starts, will benefit by the experience which was gained in them.

Coach Fred C. O'Brien of East Boston, has a squad of 50 candidates working out daily and expects a successful season although he has but four veterans. Tow quartet which has had the benefit of last years' experience is composed of Santarlis, tackle; Mortimer, center, Hazelton, halfback and Sacco tackle.

Eight veterans have returned to Huntington School for football practice and prospects for a successful season are very bright. Captain Berry, guard, Blake, Ford and Silverberg, tackle, Gow, center, Hayes and Hartman, tackles, and Duest, end, are the eight upon whom Coach Wm. Hill depends. Hill, ex-star, former Somerville coach, and Myles Lane, the great Dartmouth back, are assisting Coach Moore with the team's pig-skin education.

Stan Burnham, the Marblehead coach, thinks that he has a good team. Carl Giles, stellar quarterback, is flanked by Bassett and Carl Dane, two fast halfbacks, and this trio ought to give Winthrop plenty of trouble tomorrow. The ends are Hammond and Moore; tackles, Winstone and Goodwin; guards, Bartlett and Stone; center, Meservy, and fullback, Doane.

HOLBROOK LOST TO HARVARD ELEVEN

By TED LYNCH

Harvard's football camp is in silence today, partly because Coach Horween had declared a holiday, and mainly because the Crimson team has lost one of its best backs in Holbrook, for seven weeks, if not for the season.

Injury's have been coming thick and fast at Harvard this fall, but none of these losses can cope with the newest ailment which has fallen on the unlucky shoulders of young Guy Holbrook. One may obliterated, a knee may be bone of playing football this fall and also Harvard's use of a real share back.

Holbrook has been the victim of a trick knee ever since his high school days. As a schoolboy at Newton high, he was forced to the sidelines several times during the season. These unwanted rest periods came to Holbrook again at Harvard.

WAS ICE STAR

He was one of the best hockey players in college last winter, but again the trick knee prevented him from reaching the top of his game in the ice sport.

Dr. Tommy Richards, Harvard's all-star medico, cut the knee open last spring and it was felt that Holbrook was sound once again.

But one play licked him. He plunged through center and the usual pile of players mounted on him. Finally the whole blew and after the pile was cleared Holbrook was found prostrate on the ground. In a minute he was carried in a cart to the locker building, then came the doctor's report that he was out for the season.

Holbrook is going to be missed sadly after the season gets under way. He was a leading light by his line bucking last season and was a hole for a rapid back.

JO POTTER IS HURT

But it is a case of hard luck heaped upon hard luck at Harvard this fall. No sooner had Holbrook been carried from the field than Jo Potter Harvard baby giant, wrenched his arm so badly that the doctors reported his case as uncurable for one month at least.

It will be a gloomy crowd of Harvard players who watch the Boston College-Catholic University game this afternoon. It will be a worried Horween who sets foot on Dartmouth land this morning.

CANZONERI LOSES TITLE

This game little invader, Andre Routis, won the title last night in Madison Square Garden from Tony Canzoneri, clever Italian, with one of the most remarkable comebacks the ring has witnessed in some time.

Knocked down and badly battered in the first round, apparently badly beaten at the end of the seventh, Routis put on a stirring finish to beat Canzoneri in a sensational 15-round slugging match.

Remarkable endurance, rare fighting courage and persistency, plus an effective body attack, enabled Routis to overcome a bad start near down the champion and win the verdict. It was a close fight decided on a two-to-one vote of the judges and referee, but the crowd of 11,000 as well as ringside experts, appeared satisfied that the new champion had fairly won his new honors.

Glenna Collett 10 Up on Miss Van Wie

Cascades Golf Club, Hot Springs, Va., Sept. 29 (AP)—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., made a great start toward her third national golf championship today when she played the first 18 holes in 76 to lead Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago 10 up in their 36-hole final match.

The cards for the first nine:

Par, out..... 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 5 5—41
Miss Collett, out... 4 5 4 2 5 4 4 3 5—36
V. Wie, out..... 5 5 5 3 5 5 3 3 5—34

The cards: For the second nine:

Par— In ..... 5 5 5 5 4 3 5 4—41—82
Collett— In ..... 4 4 6 4 4 4 5 4 3—40—76
Van Wie— In ..... 6 4 5 4 4 4 5 6 4—41—90

Miss Collette played the first nine holes in 36 for the third time in three days and was seven up on the young Chicago girl as they started home. Glenna's great game completely overshadowed her young opponent who nevertheless kept at it with determination.

The 19-year-old Chicago girl played better golf coming home but could not cope with the uncanny putting and on almost every green was closer to the cup after reaching the green. Miss Van Wie's medal score of 90 was many strokes above her average play during the championship so much also played her way to the finals with three sensational victories, two at the home hole from former champions and one in an extra hole match.

How the contestants fared:

NO. 1, 351 YARDS; PAR 5.

Miss Van Wies drive found the rough to the left, while Miss Collett's straight down the fairway was 10 yards past the 200-yard sign. No. 3—340 YARDS, PAR 4.

Glenna again was in front from the tee on the third hole, although by only a few yards. Both were on the green in two, but Virginia was near the edge. She putted past the cup and missed coming back, while Miss Collett got her par four to go two up.

The former champion sent her the shot to the fourth on the green seven feet from the cup. The Chicago girl was trapped with her second. Her third went off the green and she surrendered and conceded up, but Miss Collett nevertheless sank her putt for her second dunce on this hole in two days. Miss Collett went three up.

Miss Collett hit a drive of 225 yards at the sixth and was in two, while Miss Van Wie was well down in a trap. Virginia exploded on, 15 feet from the cup. Glenna's putt for a three was short and Virginia stopped on the edge of the cup. Miss Collett, with a four to a five, was 3 up.

NO. 7, 473 YARDS, PAR 5.

Glenna drove 229 yards on the seventh, two shots on Virginia. Miss Collett was almost as far with her second as Miss Van Wie was with three. Neither was on the green. Virginia putted well past and then missed again. Miss Collett won her hole, five up and left her with a four at the ninth to equal men's par.

NO. 9, 425 YARDS, PAR 5.

Miss Van Wie's drive was in the rough and her attempt to use a brassie failed when the ball struck against a steep hill. Glenna also was short and they reached the green, Miss Collett three to five. Miss Collett seven up.

No. 10, 317 YARDS, PAR 5.

Miss Van Wie's drive was tenth was shorter but straighter than that of Miss Collett, who had to play from the rough. Virginia second went in a trap to the left of the green and Glenna found one to the right.

Miss Collett exploded to within three feet of the pin. Miss Van Wie went for the cup, missed coming back and conceded the hole Miss Collett made her putt for a four to go eight up.

No. 11, 136 YARDS, PAR 3.

Miss Collett sliced to a trap on the short 11th and Miss Van Wie topped her drive into a trap in front of the green. Both exploded out with Miss Collett well inside. Miss Van Wie sent her third three feet from the cup. Miss Collett putted to within a few inches and it was a half at four. Miss Collett 8 up.

No. 12, 405 YARDS, PAR 5.

At the 12th Miss Collett hooked her drive into a water hazard and had to drop with a penalty stroke. Her ball struck the same tree which caused her trouble on this hole yesterday. She took four to get on 25 feet from the cup. Virginia was on in three after pitching her second in a trap. Miss Van Wie won the hole with a five to six, leaving Miss Collett 7 up.

No. 13, 417 YARDS, PAR 5.

Glenna pushed her drive to rough on the 13th, while Virginia was in the fairway. The Chicago girl then sliced her second badly and had a long three left. Glenna's second kicked into a trap. She pitched from the trap all the way over the green. Miss Van Wie reached the green with her third, but putted well past the cup. Miss Collett's chip was short. Miss Van Wie however missed her five, and it was a half at six. Miss Collett 7 up.

No. 14, 406 YARDS, PAR 5.

Miss Collett was well in front of Miss Van Wie from the tee at the 14th and was on the edge of the green with her second, while Miss Van Wie was short. Virginia sent her third four feet from the cup. Miss Collett putted to within three feet. It was a half at four. Miss Collett still seven up.

No. 15 237 YARDS, PAR 4.

Both drove well on the 15th but Miss Collett's ball was in another trap. She exploded out while Virginia pitched on and left herself with a sure four. It was another half at four with Miss Collett still seven up.

NO. 16—418 YARDS—PAR 5

Miss Van Wie was in the rough on one side and Miss Collett on the other side after the drives on the 16th. Both reached the green in 3, but Miss Van Wie took 3 putts, for a 5 won for Glenna to send her 8 up.

NO. 17—170 YARDS—PAR 3

Glenna got a beautiful 200-yard drive on the dog leg 17th and could go for the green while Virginia had to play for the elbow. She hit the side of the mountain but kicked toward the green on the fairway. Miss Collett followed with a great brassie shot on the green past the pin. Virginia was on in 3. Both took two putts, giving Glenna 4 on 3 and making her 9 up.

NUMBER 17—200 YARDS, PAR 4

Glenna's drive at the 18th landed in rough to the left with Virginia short of the green to the right. Glenna played on a few feet from the pin while Virginia went well past, but was close for her 4. & Miss Collett sank her putt for the birdie 3 to go ten up with 18 holes to play.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 29—United States Military Academy opens its football season here today with the strong Boston University eleven that has ever invaded West Point.

Every starting man on the Pershing eleven has played against Army at least once and in addition to the excellent experienced material Coaches Brown and Robinson arrived in town with plenty of sensational fresh backs who have been starring in high school and preparatory school.

Coach Jones, although he has much stronger eleven than Boston University, is entirely distasteful with the term. It has not working well as a unit and the gridiness might result disastrous for them.

Another worry for the Army coach is his substitute material last years he had plenty of material. This year the squad is short and often do not seem to be to the standard of former years.

3 VETERAN BACKS

In the backfield Coach Jones has three veteran stars and one sophomore. The new attacker in backfield, will attempt to fill the shoes of "Light Horse" Harry Wilson, one of the greatest backs Army ever had. This is All-American senior year. He has been out football every year but has never won a letter.

There has been another change at right guard, and Dibbs, another who has never made his letter, has been given the starting honor. Center is a troublesome position.

Pearson, substitute last year, was slated for the job this fall, but he was hurt and cannot play today. This has made it necessary for Hal to shift from tackle to center. He starts today, without having a sub who can to relieve him.

With a new center, a new guard, a new halfback and two new ends, together with lack of substitute material, it is not surprising that Coach Jones wants to make many changes.

U. S. F. A. ORDERS FINES LIFTED

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—The United States Football association today intervened in behalf of the Hakoah team, New York Giants and Newark soccer clubs, which were suspended by the American Soccer league for participating in the National Challenge Cup competition conducted by the U. S. F. A. after the American Soccer League had ordered not to.

The following statement was issued by Edward Cahill, secretary of the U. S. F. A., from its president, Kurt Geiger, Detroit:

"Decision arrived at by national commission, no league has a right to prevent a club entering or taking part in our national competition. Therefore, notify Cunningham of Newark and Hakoah of Jersey that the fines and suspensions inflicted on these clubs by Manager Hall, the league will stand suspended from all privileges in the association."

Cahill told Bill Cunningham, president of the American Soccer League, was notified at once of decision to Boston. The statement indicated by Patterson's statement means debarment from competition in the tournament. The U. S. F. A. is the parent governing body of the sport.

STOLEN LOVE

Will Any Man Love Girl With a Past?

CHAPTER 12.

JOAN turned the key in the door slowly a few evenings later.

She knew what was waiting for her on the little hall table, even before Maisie, frying chops in the kitchen, pushed the swinging door ajar, and called, "There's a letter for you!"

Maisie, sympathetic Maisie, who never knew that anyone ever wanted to be alone, came and waited, drying her ink-ringed hands on a kitchen apron, while Joan ripped the big manilla envelope open.

All her letters, forlorn little pile of them, came back to her. And Mrs. Martin was glad Joan wrote, she was indeed, because she didn't know what to do with the letters. If it not sending his address or anything, but she knew he was getting along all right, because he was a good boy, and he sent money home regularly. And she hoped Joan would come and see her because her daughter's husband got a real nice job in Saint Alford and didn't live with her any more, and she was getting the house looking real nice, and there would be lots of cherries this year.

"Don't cry, dearie!" Maisie slipped a protecting arm around her. "You see—he never did get the letters, did he? You were right, after all—weren't you? He never got them—"

I'm not crying." Joan said steadily, poking at the little brass clasp on the envelope. "He didn't get them—he—never sent for them."

"You mustn't worry because he didn't write to you. You can't expect a young boy to remember long They don't, honey, they just don't—

"Yes," I know, Maisie."

"Well, then you shouldn't cry over him!"

But I didn't cry—over—"

It was true she didn't cry. Not even in the long nights when she lay wide-eyed, and wakeful, thinking . . . thinking . . . It was her own fault she had run after him. She wanted him to love her. She called him back that night in the moonlight when he wanted to go away. She called him back and begged him to kiss her good-bye. And when he did she clung to him, and would not let him go. She had thrown herself at him—cheapened herself—no wonder he was through with her letters. Good riddance to her. Good riddance to that Johnnie Hastings who was a bad girl . . . a bad girl, like her mother before her . . .

One night when she came home after work she found the table set with the lace tablecloth, and all the best silver that Maisie kept in little red flannel bags under the mattress in the wall bed. Maisie herself was all in a flutter, frying some delicious little kitchen. She pointed to Joan's room with a long handled fork—"Fanny's in your room, resting. She just got back from New York—she's going to stay for dinner—"

"Fanny?"

"Mme. de Guitry. Now, you know, you'll like her. She's a dressmaker, and married a French aviator—de Guitry, her name is—she calls it Francine de Guitry. Don't you remember I said she owned that swell place on Sutter st—Maison Francine? Well, she go s East all the time to look over the styles, and she just got back—just had the salad on the table, will you, dearie, and call her?"

Madame de Guitry—no one but Maisie could have thought of her as Fanny—had the most languid of smiles for Joan. She said with it, "Yes, see—he never did get the letters, did he? You were right, after all—weren't you? He never got them—"

"Will You Come to My Apartment?"

"Hastings, will you come to my apartment?"

"You tell them you're working for Maison Francine."

ing to get yourself disliked around here if you don't stop high hatting the girls—"

"I don't high hat them—"

"You do! Now you can be just as good as you want to be and take it from Jill Maude, it pays. The next time I set up housekeeping myself it's going to be with a French marriage license over the door and no mistake. But you don't catch me staying up by mese because some of the girls have more liberal ideas than I used to have. There's more than one circus in this world, and don't you forget it, you little goody-goody!"

Goody goody. Joan got to hate the word. She didn't want to be a good Goody, and she didn't want to be like the girls, either. She tried to make friends with them though—tried desperately and failed . . .

Anna, the other model, with the round black eyes and the slick wings of black hair over her ears, cried herself like a queen. Joan ran out and bought a cheap little kimono for her, and a big box of red car waited for her at the door.

Alice, the chief assistant to Madame, who was crippled like Kenan as Hogan, gossiped bitterly about Anna when her back was turned but even Joan knew they envied her figure.

Marguerite Sinderson working to support a tubercular ex husband, was a decent enough soul, but reminded Joan of Mrs. Martin. She looked so tired and discouraged that Joan could not bear to keep up to herself she was a snob with the girls.

Meanwhile Joan was an enigma to them.

"Marguerite's a saint—and she led the rest until they liked her.

"But the last time Hastings will have a note in his apartment after dinner, Maud added. "I saw him the first time I will ask you!"

Francine Band Sue stopped and patted Joan a shoulder. "Yes, go ahead, my dear. I'm going to run up to Maisie's and help her fill that box when—"

(To be continued Monday)

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When at a dance with a boy friend, what is the correct thing to say to another boy friend who asks for a dance, when the boys know each other? What is the method of procedure when they do not know each other? Should they be introduced?

2. What is the answer to "I beg your pardon?" "Certainly" sounds so inane.

3. Should a boy friend be asked after one has attended a dance with him, and if so, how long should he stay?

D. M. S.

WHEN the boys know each other, the gentleman, after he has asked you to dance, turns to your partner and says, "Do you mind?" and then you "excuse" yourself as you go away. Just as you would under any other circumstances, if they do not know each other, you introduce them—and then "proceed as before."

2. As a matter of fact, what usually happens is that both are said "I beg your pardon," at the same time. Did you ever notice that? or one person is saying "I beg your pardon," and the other is saying "I'm sorry." Or one may say, "I beg your pardon," and the other, "That's quite all right." Or sometime, only a bow—a pleasant bow—is enough to acknowledge this.

3. After a dance is far too late an hour to "ask him in." "Use common" must be careful about point interpretations in disregarding calling hours.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Some girls have been having a discussion about the way to address a clergyman. Some say he should be called Mr. Smith in speaking to him, others say it should be Reverend Smith in speaking of him or introducing him. Naturally one uses "Reverend, but in a personal conversation with a clergyman which is the correct form to use? We are going to let you settle the question. M. M.

WHEN addressing a clergyman you use "Mr." Smith, unless he has been given the degree of Doctor of Divinity. If he has this degree, he has won the honor of being addressed always as Doctor Smith. In any case, you would not address a clergyman as Reverend Smith; nor would you use this title when you introduce him.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

At a wedding in which the double ring service is used, does the little ring bearer carry both rings?

If we do not plan to have a ring bearer, what do we do about the two rings? Who holds them?

READER

IF you have a ring bearer, he can carry both rings attached to his ring-pillow or in his basket, or in whatever you plan to have him carry, or he may carry only the bride's ring and the best man can carry the groom's ring.

It is not especially interesting and certainly not "up-to-date" to have a ring bearer nowadays in the wedding procession. In a cosmopolitan wedding, there is rarely seen a ring bearer. Usually this omission is justified, for the ring bearer gives a theatrical effect to the wedding, and there is no reason for his being in the wedding party. If he can act as a page without being conspicuous and if it is attached to looks assured and stiff and formal and I advise you not to have a ring bearer, especially since you are loath to about having one anyway.

It is far easier to carry the rings in a clean and safe manner into the keeping of the proper person only at the proper time in the ceremony.

When the double ring ceremony is used the groom puts a ring on the ring finger of the bride, and she puts the groom's ring

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a widow and I intend to wear mourning. When may I leave off mourning? When may I go to wear white? Also, how long may I discard black altogether?

2. How long do one owe to for a husband?

Mrs. L.

THE question of mourning is a very individual one these days when mourning is getting very much "out" of style. It is not even been before. Many people do not wear mourning at all, or only for a widow just to wear it long enough to satisfy custom. However, the ultra conservative wears a most rigid affair, the funeral being a year, mourning for one year, and half mourning for another year. It is this may be shortened if one wishes.

From the very first day, the widow usually lays aside everything with white crepe or crepe collars and cuffs. Crepe veils are worn.

And remember that a little fresh touch of white in just enough deep mourning as all black. This is a very comforting and comfortable rule to follow if you are sad and for those who are. A white veil or crepe collar is perfect for wear in the evening at home.

2. How long one "mourns" for anyone depends entirely on the person in mourning and the degree of affection he or she holds in the heart for the person who has died. But in mourning should be governed by the good sense of a man from the word. Here, too, in this important phase of life we must be governed by good taste.

CHILD'S IMAGINATION

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

THE grandmother put down her sewing and turned her head slightly to listen to the chatter which came from the next room. "I didn't know Jane had anyone in to play with her. Who is it?" she inquired of Jane's mother.

"She is alone," replied the mother. "She's playing with Rura."

The grandmother regarded her with puzzled old eyes.

"Who is Rura?" she asked.

"Rura is one of her imaginary little girls. She has two of them. The other she calls Emma."

The grandmother shook her head, and honest alarm glowed in her faded eyes. "There never was any insanity in our family," she finally mused. "I can't understand it. I wouldn't let her do it, Jane. It sounds spooky."

Imaginary playmates usually enter into the life of most children and are no occasion for alarm. Children are alone a great deal generally create one or more characters to whom they talk. In a case like this, it is a sense of loneliness which fosters the imaginary children, and can be remedied by a conscious effort on the part of the mother.

Sometimes, though, even when a child has plenty of playmates, he suddenly takes unto himself a playmate of this type, and when it occurs under these conditions, it is well to listen to the conversations, the liberties given the imaginary child to find out if it doesn't arise from repressions, or restrictions thrown needlessly around the child. You will find, possibly, that the child is playing that the imaginary youngster can do the things he would LIKE to do but which have been forbidden him. Then, it is a matter of using your judgment in withdrawing as many hampering ties about his freedom as you can consistently do.

If your child has created characters and plays with them continually, suggest that he help you with whatever you are doing. Give him the responsibility of part of the care of his room. Include him in the cake baking, in the sprinkling of the lawn, in your general daily activities for a week or so. Keep him near you and talk to him, and if possible, invite little people over to play with him often. He will outgrow the imaginary playmates, and unless you allow this pastime to grow to the abnormal proportions where it pushes out any desire for normal companionship, it will not harm him. In fact, it points to an imagination which is well developed and capable of creating. Encourage it in story telling by the child, later writing little tales, or making up songs. But balance this vivid imagination with contact, so that selfishness and day-dreaming may be avoided.

FAMOUS LOVERS

COZETTE DOUGLASS

WHETHER Gregory Orloff was or was not the lover of the Empress Catherine's life, is a fact so obscure that it will ever remain a secret. Stifling it to say that he was her favorite for a long time and many a song and story has been written around their romance.

Catherine was the daughter of a German prince, and her ambition at the Russian Court was through her mother's influence. Her mother, the princess of Anhalt-Zerbst was the daughter of Christian Albert, bishop of Lubeck, younger brother of Frederick IV, the duke of Holstein-Gottrop, and paternal grandfather of the Grand Duke Peter of Russia, who was later recognized heir to the Russian throne and Catherine's husband. It may be seen had high ambitions for her daughter. However, the diplomatic intrigue which had been planned, failed, and the subtly in her own ingratiating personality. Catherine won over the Empress Elizabeth and the Russian people. Elizabeth finally consented to the marriage between her nephew and Catherine and the nuptials took place at St. Petersburg on August 21, 1745.

From the start Catherine's marriage was a failure. Peter was a wretched creature. By nature he was mean and petty, smallpox had made him hideous and his depraved habits made him the most loathsome of creatures. Small wonder that Catherine treated him contemptuously, and surrounded herself with suitors.

Her amours were the scandal of Europe and it has been said that all those who were in power when she ascended the throne were her lovers. Perhaps this is so, and one can hardly blame her, living as she did in a court that has been called "grossly animal."

Of course, Catherine has been blamed for planning the coup, in order to make secure the throne for her son Paul. No matter what her other various intrigues and indiscretions, Catherine was a devoted mother.

Some credence is given this fact through the belief that the guards were manipulated by the Orloff brothers, the eldest of whom, Gregory, was universally recognized as the queen's favorite. He was for a time, but was quite overthrown when Catherine's favor fell on Vatlenkov. At one time the empress seriously considered the fact of marriage with her favorite but the plan was frustrated by Potemkin, also accredited with being a favorite of the queen. After Potemkin's elevation to the honor, Orloff was thrown aside like an old glove and he went away from Russia, remaining abroad for years.

Of course, one cannot credit Catherine with any one lasting affection but Orloff seems to have kept his place in her heart longer than most any of the others.

Whether from heart-break or disappointment, Orloff, for sometime before his death was insane, and it has been related that he constantly though his wife—whom he had married very late in life—to be the Catherine whom he had loved years before.

FITKIN ENTERS NEW UTILITY FIELD

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

Early in 1927 it was announced that A. E. Fitkin had retired from the public utility field, which he had entered after embarking upon a ministerial career. Mr. Fitkin's holdings were sold for around $300,000,000. Mr. Fitkin gave a million dollars to establish a home for crippled children. He offered $240,000 for a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, but the deal fell through. Now it is announced A. E. Fitkin & Co. has purchased a controlling interest in the Coast Counties Gas & Electric Co. of California.

* * *

The new Fitkin purchase includes $1,000,000 common and $1,000,000 second preferred, both of $100 par value. Coast Counties Gas & Electric had gross income of $1,923,715 for year ended August 31. Company has had contractual deals with Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for power. It operates in areas around Watsonville, Cal. In addition to stock purchased there are 25,000 shares of first preferred stock, $100 par, and about $1,300,000 in bonds outstanding and in the public's hands. This is a new field for the Fitkin interests.

It simply cannot be that you will make any mistake by attending the third annual exhibition of Massachusetts "quality" products at the Copley-Plaza October 16, 17 and 18. I attended the events in 1926 and 1927 and didn't suffer a minute of disappointment. It is a revelation to see so many good things produced in your own Commonwealth. Frank P. Stone, General Manager of the exhibition, tells me that over 90 per cent of the available space was taken this week.

Merchants National Bank has increased its surplus from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, the directors having voted to transfer $1,000,000 from undivided profits. This makes the surplus the same as the capital of the bank. Undivided profits are still over $3,000,000.

American business has "attained a general stability unparalleled in the economic history of the United States or any other important country," says the U. S. Department of Commerce in its semi-yearly review. And still many people are surprised that we have had an extraordinary bull market.

For July, the last reported month, New England's output of electric power showed a 5 per cent gain over that for July, 1927. This output is reckoned as one of the leading indices of general business.

The "Sacred Cod," proud emblem of a thriving Commonwealth and industry, apparently has benefited by advertising since former Reels trar Frank A. Goodwin placed it on our 1923 auto plates. U. S. Bureau of Fisheries figures show New England's fish receipts for the last reported month up slightly more than 29 per cent over those for the like month of last year. The gain for the part of 1928 so far reported holds around 22 per cent over the for the 1927 period. Values of catches run in about the same proportion.

SAFE ROBBERS FOILED IN LYNN

Burglars today wheeled a 200-pound safe containing $443 from the Capital Lunch, Union st., Lynn, carried it to the rear of a nearby store and after dropping it through a bulkhead escaped.

Peter Jeoyander, one of the proprietors of the lunchroom, discovered that the safe was gone when he opened up for the early morning trade. He followed the trail of the missing safe to the cellar of the nearby store, where he found safe and money intact.

MOSES SAYS SMITH RUNS LIKE TAMMANY CANDIDATE

Washington, Sept. 29 (AP)—Commenting on Governor Smith's Western trip, Senator Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the Republican Eastern Advisory Commission, asserted that the Democratic candidate has demonstrated "that he runs for President in the same terms which he ran as Tammany candidate for sheriff of New York County."

"The Democratic candidate," said Moses, "having gone from the East like the Wise Men of old, now turns his face homeward after what must have proved to be a most disappointing expenditure of time and effort."

NAB BOYS AFTER CHASE ON AUTO THEFT CHARGE

Brockton, Sept. 29—Caught after a long chase through the streets, and then a pursuit on foot across backyards and over fences, two schoolboys were to be arraigned today at a special session of juvenile court on a variety charges growing out of their alleged subsequent action of an automobile. They are Robert and Richard Craig, brothers of North Easton, the former 14 and the latter 11. The owner of the car, James T. Sisk of Belmont st., went our in a neighbor's car to look for his missing machine, and af se eighing it, gave chase and captured the two boys.

REVISED PRAYER BOOK USE LEFT TO CHURCHES

London, Sept. 29 (AP)—The second (1928) revision of the Book of Common Prayer, rejected by the House of Commons, and thus refused sanction of the State, may be used under certain circumstances, the House of Bishops of the Church of England has ruled. Parishes may have left to the people of the various dioceses, Archbishop Cosmo Gordon Lang's order said, the use of either the 1928 revision or the old Prayer Book of 1662.

CHINESE PIRATES KILL TWO BRITISH OFFICERS

Hong Kong, Sept. 29 (AP)—Two British officers and a [illegible] of the Navigation Company's steamer Anking have been killed by Chinese pirates. The pirates captured the ship with its passengers Monday Wednesday and steered it to Honghai bay. Both is north of Bias bay, the favorite haunt of Chinese pirates. The Chinese quartermaster of the vessel was also killed.

HERE'S A REAL "HE-MAN"; POLAR BEARS, BEWARE!

Copenhagen, Sept. 29 (AP)—Some he-man is he. M. Petersen, captain of Knut Rasmussen's exploring schooner in Greenland once, says Knud, Peterson in a grapple trying to capture a polar bear alive, thrust an arm down the bear's throat. The crew had to shoot the bear to free the captain.

BELIEVE NAVY PACT IS KILLED BY U. S. NOTE

London, Sept. 29 (AP)—Although the British press generally characterizes the Anglo-French naval accord as dead, official circles refuse to acknowledge that the American note has closed the door on attempts to break the existing international deadlock on the naval armaments problem.

The British cabinet must first consider the American note and it is then expected that the next step will be a British answer.

In governmental circles it is regarded as probable the entire matter will be referred to the preparatory commission at Geneva.

Some hope is seen in the American suggestion that tonnage be transferred from one category or naval vessels to another. This, it is said, will be followed up at Geneva. The American objection to the fact that only four categories of ship are mentioned in the Anglo-French draft is countered here by the statement that the British originally intended to confine the preparatory commission's agreement to nine categories from dreadnoughts to motor launches, but dropped the proposals to obtain agreement among the nations.

Officials were unable to explain why Great Britain has not yet published the new Anglo-French accord except to say that the gist of the draft is contained in the American note and that Italy has not yet been heard from.

U. S. Points Way for New Naval Armament Parley

Washington, Sept. 29 (INS)—Reduction t othe American note to France and Great Britain declining to accept as a basis for further naval disarmament the Franco-British compromise agreement on light cruiser and submarine construction, was hailed as favorable in naval and other official circles here today.

It was thought Secretary Kellogg had stated the American position in such a way as to make it impossible for a charge of hampering naval limitation to stick against the United States.

The note points the way for discussions to be resumed in the preliminary commission on disarmament of the League of Nations following informal proposals made by France, in March, 1927, at a meeting of this commission, which never became part of the record.

"The government of the United States," Kellogg said, "remains willing to use its best efforts to obtain a basis of further naval limitation satisfactory to all the naval powers, including those not represented at the three power conference in Geneva and is willing to take into consideration at such conference the special needs of France, Italy or any other naval power for the particular schools of vessels deemed by them most suitable for their defense."

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

"Be Careful" Month

October

Captain George A. Parker, State Registrar of Motor Vehicles, directs attention to the fact that with the advent of October the greatest care is necessary in order to keep down the number of fatal accidents.

October means colder weather and the bracing air of Autumn leads the motorist to "step on it." With the return to standard time, moreover, darkness will come one hour earlier. The most dangerous hour is that between 5 and 6, when streets are crowded and motorists fatigued.

"Year after year," Captain Parker reminds us, "the peak in the accident rate is reached in October."

Another seasonable warning to the automobile owner, physicians suggest, is that the garage door should be open before the engine is started.

Carbon monoxide, a subtle enemy which strikes without warning, is generated as soon as the engine is started. There is no escape for the person who breathes it.

From Dump to Fens

Two Years' Work in the Fens

Completion of a field house on the Schoolboy Athletic Field in the Fens—it will be ready for use next week and entirely finished on October 15th—will bring more schoolboys to Audubon Road and may, in time, acquaint their elders with the transformation of the Fens "from dump to park."

For a decade or more, as Mayor Nichols says, the Fens had been in shabby condition. These are some of the improvements which have been accomplished by the Park Department in two short years:

Construction of double roadways.
Tree planting along these roadways.
Regrading and planting of more than 40 acres of meadowland and slope.
Putting in of flowering shrubbery and herbaceous plants on the borders of the streams.
Installation of bridges.
Lagoon opposite the Museum of Fine Arts.
Paths approaching the Museum from the north.
Reconstruction of the main roadways on the south side of the lagoon.
Rebuilding upon spacious lines of the turn-around and parking space in front of the Evans Memorial.
Extension of the Schoolboy Athletic Field.
Children's playground.
Model yacht course.

Only by visiting the Fens and seeing these things for himself will the citizen be in a position to appreciate what the Mayor has done there for all of us. Mr. Nichols, we feel sure, will be the first to agree that no small part of the credit for the transformation belongs by right to Park Commissioner William P. Long.

Some Change Completely

And Some "Stay Put"

MODERN JAPANESE GIRL | OLD STYLE FIJI ISLAND GIRL

In some places the world changes, in some the world and its people stand still. These pictures show it.

On the left is a modern girl of Japan, whose great-grandmother would shudder to see her, and refuse to believe that she is really a JAPANESE.

On the right is a Fiji Island mother, dwelling on the edge of some lagoon in that far-off land, carrying her little baby, tied to her back, as her ancestors did centuries ago.

The Japanese lady has dropped everything that can be called Oriental, except perhaps the parasol. She has on latest shoes, that makes her feet look like a shetland pony all har-

MUCH NONSENSE IN NORDIC THEORY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

ELBERT HUBBARD said that he noticed that most chosen peoples chose themselves.

It is not only kings that imagine that, because they have certain advantages, God has selected them.

Every nation thinks that it is superior to all other nations.

The Chinese call themselves the sons of Heaven. The Japanese think their emperor has descended from divinity. We all remember the outburst of German vanity in the late war.

We are all more or less tarred with the same stick. The English think they are the only people and some Americans imagine that Americans are better than anybody else.

I used to get a great deal of literature about Nordic supremacy, though why Nordics should be any better than the other kinds of people who were made by the same Creator I never could understand.

Prof. Robert D. McKenzie, of the University of Washington, recently advanced the theory that Nordic supremacy, particularly over the colored races, was not caused by difference in race, but by difference in culture or training. This was at the Institute of Politics, in Williamstown.

An item in the New York morning papers of that day, giving the results of the marathon at the Olympic games, gave special point to his remarks.

The item said that the marathon in Holland requiring stamina and endurance, which heretofore have been regarded as Nordic attributes, had been won by a brown-skinned Algerian, with a dark-skinned Chilean second, and two yellow-skinned Japanese fourth and sixth, while the white race had to be content with third and fifth places.

The professor said that the assumption that peoples with superior technical culture are superior to peoples without has no scientific validity.

The Nordic happened to be the first to use mechanical energy, and by using the resources of this energy he got the lead over the rest of the world, and also got the big head.

There is no biological superiority of the white man. The Orientals, once they get the scientific spirit that dominates the West, will equal the white man in any kind of effort. The white man's advantage rests merely in the fact that he got the start.

This kind of talk will be a blow to those of us who think we are God's chosen people.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MARION wants to know what she shall do with her life. She's nineteen, pretty, bright and all set to go. And she has, in these wide open days, scores of opportunities. She has a flair for interior decorating—and some girls are making a fortune at that. She has a knack for entertaining—she's a splendid saleswoman—a great little secretary—in short she's pretty sure to make a success of anything she tackles. Which job shall she choose? Which job pays a woman best?

I'm thinking.

Many years ago I had a little baby. I was very young and ignorant then, with all the world before me—and I was quite as curious and eager as Marion is today.

I remember lying there in the cool of the evening, after the hard time was over. I could hear a small voice whimpering in the next room, a little new voice that had never been on earth before. As I listened, wonder came over me, and fear and delight. I said to myself:

"In the years to come, will I ever do anything greater than this? Can a woman do anything greater than this?"

That was a good many years ago. Since then I have passed through about every experience a woman may know, and tasted every freedom, good or bad.

I have known the sweetness of domestic life—

And the thrill and glamour of a professional career—

I've been rich and I've been busted—

I've had my fingers in a thousand pies—

But never yet have I known a greater thrill than came to me with that little new whimper which I had started on its way.

I've taken life as it came and, to the best of my belief, I've never passed anything up—

BUT NEVER HAVE I FOUND A GREATER PROFIT THAN THE PROFIT ONE MAKES ON MOTHERHOOD.

I'm not writing this sentimentally, because it looks pretty. I'm a selfish woman and I always want to get my money's worth. And I'm fully in sympathy with other selfish people. I like the spirit of these ardent young women who want to get all they can out of life. I admire their rebellion against drabness and useless self-sacrifice. Yet taking all that into consideration, I still say—

MOTHERHOOD IS A WOMAN'S BEST BET.

There is no job on earth which will give the average woman the joy and power and peace and pride which motherhood will give her.

She may, as a girl, look on it with suspicion. She may think of all the pain it implies, the hard work, the monotony, the sacrifice of freedom—and she's right. Motherhood does imply these things.

SO DOES ANY OTHER WORTH WHILE JOB.

BUT NO MATTER HOW GREAT THE PRICE, MOTHERHOOD STILL PAYS THE BIGGEST DIVIDENDS ON EARTH.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The pen is the tongue of the mind. —Cervantes.

He is ungrateful who denies that he has received a kindness which has been bestowed upon him; he is ungrateful who conceals it; he is ungrateful who makes no return for it; most ungrateful of all is he who forgets it.—Seneca.

By union the smallest states thrive, by discord the greatest are destroyed.—Sallust.

Be a pattern to others, and then all will go well; for as a whole city is affected by the licentious passions and vices of great men, so it is likewise reformed by their moderation.—Cicero.

Many a dangerous temptation comes to us in fine gay colors, that are but skin deep.—Henry.

What we have inherited from our fathers and mothers is not all that "walks in us." There are all sorts of dead ideas and lifeless old beliefs. They have no tangibility, but they haunt us all the same and we cannot get rid of them.—Ibsen.

Innocence has nothing to dread.—Racine.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—Gathering information about the decline or increasing popularity of hair bobbing is as difficult as picking up a ball of mercury with the fingers. Some say the craze has spent itself and others say it has just begun. Take your choice.

There is, however, a surprising increase of long hair among young girls. These are maids reared in the bob-haired era and consider long locks an adventure—something different. It is said 90 per cent of New York women between 17 and 40 are bobbed.

While many so-called flappers are permitting their hair to grow, there is an increasing number of elderly ladies having their heads shingled. Many bobbing parlors report a steady patronage of women past 70.

The advocates of bobbing are heartened when Mary Pickford was shorn of her lovely tresses which indicates chiefly she is through with wistful movie roles. And Ina Claire, who is a shrine for flapper worship continues to wear short hair.

One thing seems certain. Transformations are just a passing fad, and the purple, green and orange wigs seen about Paris have not taken hold in Manhattan. One of the new effects in coiffure is a wind blown bob with a middle part down the back.

A musical show producer is to present a chorus of long-haired gals this season, believing its sheer oddity will attract customers. Many women keep their hair because of the objections of their husbands, who refuse to be converted to clipping. The old fashioned dodos.

That long hair these days actually attracts attention is indicated by a number of ladies eternally seeking the spotlight who have permitted their hair to grow. Hair bobbers say the upkeep for a smartly bobbed head is around $400 a year. We used to marry and go to Niagara Falls for less.

WHAT surprises many of us doddering grannies around town is not the way older women bob their hair, but the way they daily with kitchen gin. At the opening of a roof garden this summer there were more than a dozen gray-haired matrons weaving about the dance floor all giggled-up, kittenish and everything. Still it is pretty tiresome to see young folk slaking all the mean thirsts.

ONE lady this same evening came into the reception room of the roof garden where there was a striking view of the city from a balcony. "I have lived in this hotel 16 years," she said, "and never knew before of such a view." The lady did not know she was looking from a new wing of the hotel just opened. That is New York. They can build a building next door and you may never notice it.

BRUCE REYNOLDS, a Lambs Club wit, is back on Broadway after a tour of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Russia. Reynolds had spent a fortune seeing the world chiefly through the small end of a highball glass along the White Way. At 46, he learned his lesson and quit drinking for good. He decided to become a real globe trotter—duck-hill cap, binoculars and everything—and has been a bird of passage since, writing two successful travel books and is now at work on the third. He is one of those rare cards who will sit up with a gang until dawn without drinking or smoking, and wearing the wise old expression of an owl. He had his headaches and is extremely happy to be merely a spectator.

A NEW YORK bellboy was asked if the chef could fashion a good Welsh rarebit. "I expect he can," he replied brightly. "He comes from a rabbit country."

Some Change Completely

nessed up, she has a boyish bob, instead of the Japanese girl's strange and ponderous coiffure.

Her dress, with flowers on it and short skirt, leaves nothing to be desired. In fact, she is "up to date."

It is said that conservative Japan views with indignation modern girls that trot around the streets in short skirts, discussing Bolshevism, Socialism and everything else, as though girls had a right to think for themselves.

Here in America, however, we congratulate the modern Westernized Japanese young lady, who is better for the change, even if the shoes and short skirt are rather foolish.

If you don't CHANGE, you can't IMPROVE.

If you do change, there is at least the POSSIBILITY that you will improve.

And no nation on earth in the last fifty years has gone ahead in the direction of real improvement more than the Japanese.

However, in considering any sudden, violent change, bear in mind the old text: "Prove all things, HOLD FAST that which is GOOD."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THIS is the universal debt; to make Earth's good grow better yet. To lessen, though by smallest share, the burdens weary brothers bear, to give sweet solace to the old as shadows of the night unfold; for those who come, to leave in trust a heritage of life more just. More sweet than life has been before, to seek faith's heights, to find truth's core. This is the debt which all men owe to those who come, to those who go.
